Truman Asks Congress To Provide Guarantees For Investors Abroad

President Submits Program for Helping Backward Regions; Seeks $45,000,000

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday sent Congress his long-awaited request for American help to develop the backward or under-developed areas of the world.

He asked Congress for two things as "only the first steps" in a venture "that extends far into the future":

1. Forty-five million dollars for what has been described as American "show-how," either through sending American technicians to foreign countries or bringing foreigners here for technical training.

2. Broad authority for the Export-Import Bank to guarantee American private investment in productive enterprises in foreign countries against "the risks peculiar to those investments."

The message went to Congress more than five months after the President had first called for such a program in his inaugural address January 20. At that time he said a "bold new program" was needed to raise standards of living in backward areas, and he listed it as the fourth of four major objectives of American foreign policy.

From this listing it came to be known as "Point IV," and stirred greater interest throughout the world than any new departure in foreign policy since the Marshall Plan.

Yesterday's message had been delayed so long in the executive branch that action on it at this session of Congress was thought unlikely. The two houses still have to approve military aid to western Europe, which Secretary of State Acheson has been seeking as a matter of urgency before the adjournment.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee showed earlier this week that it had little enthusiasm for added spending on technical assistance at this time. It rejected a request from President Truman to authorize 10 million dollars a year for the agriculture, health and education programs of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs.

Instead, the committee ruled that the United States contribution to the institute should be no more than the present amount of five million dollars annually.

The message carefully explained that the technical assistance would not be a brand-new program, but would be an expansion of "relatively modest" efforts that have been made for years by American Government and international agencies.

"The aid that is needed," said the President, "falls roughly into

Retail Food Here Up Again

Prices Cut on Baby Carriages, Some Men's Suits, Linoleum

More price cuts were announced yesterday, this time on some suits for men, baby carriages and linoleum.

The cheering news came as the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported the cost of living in the Nation oozed downward three-tenths of 1 per cent in the month ended May 15.

But in Washington, retail food prices rose half of 1 per cent in the month, the third straight increase. The consumers' price index for Washington May 15 was only eight-tenths of 1 per cent under a year ago.

Other Government figures released yesterday, however, contained good news—a drop in claims for unemployment benefits and a prediction 1949 may surpass 1948 in total building construction.

These were the price reduction announcements:

Goodall Co. in New York said the retail price of its 1949 Palm Beach suits, now $27.50, will drop 28 per cent to $19.75 during a sale period from July 11 to September 15. The new price will be the lowest since 1942 and within $2 of the prewar price in 1941.

The company said new prices will be fixed about September 15 for 1950 models. Trade sources expect higher prices. The company said the summer cut was made because many distributors were compelled by "unusual conditions" to ask the firm's permission to clear out stocks before the end of hot weather.

Inventories of men's suits have been reported at about the same level as last summer but sales are off around 10 per cent, a Dun & Bradstreet survey recent showed.

The Welsh Co. of St. Louis announced price cuts up to 30 per cent on baby carriages, swings, strollers and sulkies.

Armstrong Cork Co. of Lancaster, Pa., announced cuts of 2 to 10 per cent on base mill prices of linoleum, felt base linotile, linowall and other items. The new prices are effective at once.

The Palm Beach suit price cut created quite a stir in New York, clothing industry headquarters. The Associated Press quoted one leading maker of summer suits as declaring his firm's prices "are already low enough to keep our sales volume up." Other firms took a "wait and see" attitude.

Another happy economic note came from a Commerce Department mid-year review of building activity. So much public building

½-Cent Milk Raise Sought In Virginia

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The Virginia Milk Commission yesterday was asked to authorize a half-cent increase in the retail price of milk for the Virginia area near Washington.

If the commission should authorize an increase in retail milk prices, it will legally affect only Alexandria, Arlington and a part of Fairfax County. But dairy spokesmen said prices would be raised equally throughout the Washington area. Commissioner Chairman Tipton R. Snavely said the commission will announce its decision next Wednesday.

Dairy spokesmen, who had requested yesterday's hearing, said they needed the increase to meet the rise in distributing costs—particularly labor costs—in the past three months.

Request for the increase was made at an Alexandria hearing by two major Washington area distributors — Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy and Alexandria Dairy Products Co., Inc. They also asked that the $5.56 a hundredweight now paid producers for Class I milk remain unchanged for the present.

Thompson's Asks Change

Thompson's Dairy asked that the distributors' "spread" (difference between producer and retail prices) be increased by a quarter to a half cent. It did not specify, however, whether this should take the form of a cut in the producers' price or an increase in retail prices.

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which controls most of the milk sold in the Washington area, asked that present producers' prices remain in effect "until economic conditions affecting the local milk supply . . . indicate that a review of the

2 U. S. Probes Are Ordered in Hooded Terror

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Two investigations of terrorism by hooded nightriders in Alabama were ordered here yesterday.

Attorney General Clark, after a preliminary check by the FBI, told his department's crime-busting agency to go ahead with a full field probe. On the basis of the partial check, Clark said Ku Klux Klan members "purportedly" were involved and that twice local law enforcement officers "reportedly" had failed to protect victims.

A House Judiciary subcommittee headed by Representative Byrne (D., N. Y.) announced it would open hearings Wednesday on the reign of terror near Birmingham, Ala. The committee said its first witness would be Clark Stallworth, a Birmingham Post reporter, who was assaulted when working on the case for his newspaper.

The House investigation, ordered by Chairman Celler (D., N. Y.) of the Judiciary Committee, brought protests from Southern Representatives.

Representative Battle, Alabama Democrat in whose Jefferson County district the series of beatings and cross-burnings took place, said "any Federal exploitation" would "deter rather than expedite justice."

Mississippi's John Rankin was equally positive, but more succinct. Said he:

"The less the gentleman from New York, Mr. Celler, sticks his nose into our affairs, the better it will be."

Miss Coplon Distrustful Of Gubitchev

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Amid the defendant's screams "I am innocent, I have been framed!" the cross-examination of Judith Coplon came to a trembling end yesterday in District Court.

Rising once in the witness stand, the suspended Government girl shrieked in a bursting spasm:

"This whole case is so fishy it smells to high heaven!"

"Frame-up!" she had screamed before.

But yesterday she charged that specific Justice Department associates, including one of her present prosecutors, and perhaps Valentin Gubitchev himself, her alleged confederate in espionage, participated in a plot to "get" her.

She answered only "I do not know" to a question as to whether she thought the Attorney General himself was a part of the "conspiracy."

It was a tour de force of cataclysmic proportions that erupted from the 5-foot, 100-pound Barnard College honor graduate, who was arrested March 4 in New York with the Russian U. N. engineer Gubitchev, her purse crammed with FBI confidential data.

It was ten minutes of shrieks and screams and shouting, accented by furiously gesturing hands.

Her white-bloused bosom quivered and her black eyes stared in hate into the eyes of her prosecutor as she yelled "entrapment!"

The tumbling words echoed from the walls of the packed courtroom, outside which spectators had waited for hours to see and hear her and where in the corridors hundreds more, hissing 'Where's Judy? . . . Is that Judy?" stayed on merely for a glimpse.

It was the prosecutor himself who purposely, it appeared, gave her the opportunity to turn the witness stand into a podium for her "frame-up" cries.

The courtroom clock had moved around to 12.01 p. m., almost three days to the minute after Chief Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., had had the 28-year-old Miss Coplon under relentless cross-examination.

His manner seemed to suggest that he was about at an end of it when he waited a moment, fingering a pencil, and in easy tones asked:

"Now, Miss Coplon, do I understand that it is your testimony before this jury that as respects this prosecution you are an innocent woman and that there is a conspiracy afoot to frame you . . . is that your testimony?"

The question jerked Miss Coplon forward in her chair. Her royal-blue skirt tumbled around her in the witness stand as she flung back her answer:

"My testimony is, and it always will be, I am innocent and I have been framed!"

Kelley's eyes gave back her piercing stare as he asked:

"And you think that many persons have participated in this framing of you?"

The defendant's voice rose: "I

Hiss Denies All Charges By Chambers

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

New York, June 24.—Without qualification, Alger Hiss today denied Whittaker Chambers' detailed allegation of close relations with Hiss during 1937 and 1938.

Testifying for the second day in his perjury trial, Hiss appeared to have conceded nothing which bears on charges that he lied in denying he saw Chambers in those years or provided him with secret State Department papers.

For more than two hours on the witness stand, Hiss replied to Chambers accusations with such bald answers as:

"Certainly not!"

"Not one word of truth."

"Of course not."

"I did not and she (Mrs. Hiss) did not."

Goes Back to 1934

The denials rang through the Federal courtroom as Chief Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker led Hiss through a rush of questioning starting with his first meeting with Chambers "in the latter part of December, 1934, or early in January, 1935."

He placed their final meeting "in late May or early June, 1936."

Hiss Gets Bankbook Back From Court

New York, June 24.—One exhibit in the perjury trial of 44-year-old Alger Hiss had particular attraction for him today.

He brought in a bankbook for a savings account he holds jointly with Mrs. Hiss, so he could testify about a $400 withdrawal which the prosecution charges was given to Whittaker Chambers.

After the trial ended for the day, Hiss called out, "What about my bankbook? This is one exhibit I intend to keep. This is a current account."

He got it back, as it had not actually been marked as evidence.

Chambers, admitted courier for the spy ring, declares he visited Hiss' home as late as Christmas, 1938, and unsuccessfully begged Hiss to join him in renouncing underground work for a Communist spy ring.

Most of Hiss' testimony was a repitition—in flatter terms — of that which he gave late last August to the House Committee on Un-American Activities, to the Federal grand jury which indicted him in December, and to attorneys in the $75,000 libel suit he filed last year against Chambers.

He noted that when he first went before the House committee early in August—first saying he did not remember Chambers, and later confronting him and recalling him as a man he knew, and befriended under another name—he appeared there without stopping to check records or search his memory closely.

Today, as yesterday, Hiss sounded sure of himself, answering the barrage of questions without hesitation, showing no uneasiness or equivocation.

Occasionally he lolled with his

Beran In Good Health, Secretary Reports

Prague, June 24 (U.P.).—Dr. Jan Boukal, secretary of Archbishop Josef Beran, said today the prelate is in good health and free to move about as he wishes.

He said there is no question of the archbishop's being under house arrest.

Boukal, whose own arrest had been reported, was produced by the government man in charge of the archbishopric consistory (Beran's office) when a reporter entered the archbishop's palace to inquire as to his whereabouts.

Church and diplomatic quarters already had reported the Communists have been closing monasteries and arresting priests in that southernmost province and stronghold of Catholicism.

Archbishop Josef Beran, now held incommunicado, is accused of being the leader of the clergy's opposition to state efforts to control or replace the church.

The government announcement said police action was taken against "reactionary" clerics for "creating disturbances."

21 Senators Demand Firm China Policy

By the United Press

A group of 21 Senators yesterday asked President Truman for assurance the United States will not recognize the Communist regime in China and thus abrogate his "quarantine communism" doctrine.

Their letter was made public shortly after Senators Connally (D., Tex.) and Vandenberg (R., Mich.) got into a hot foreign policy dispute on the Far East and touched off a Republican demand for disclosure of the long-secret Wedemeyer report on China.

The 21 Senators demanded that the Administration steer clear of the Chinese Communists and give all possible help to "the constitutional government of China and the forces opposing communism."

They asserted that any other policy would be inconsistent with the President's own anti-Communist doctrine, proclaimed when he asked Congress for millions to help Greece and Turkey keep the Communists at bay in the Middle East.

One Senator, who declined use of his name, said he had been informed that the State Department has recognition of the Chinese Communist regime "under active study."

The letter was signed by:

Total 'Play' In D. C. Area Yearly Put In Millions

Admission to Probers For Internal Revenue Linked to Official In Prince Georges

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

Several gamblers operating between Washington and Prince Georges County have handled an annual "play" of as much as 10 million dollars each, The Washington Post learned yesterday.

They and their smaller fry colleagues are now the subjects of an intensive income tax investigation by the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Department of Justice.

One of the major gamblers, The Washington Post learned, opened his safe deposit box for Internal Revenue men, who promptly impounded more than $200,000 in cash found in it. The money was in $10,000 and $1000 bills.

"Graft" Disclosed

Another man, a Prince Georges County official connected with law enforcement, opened his safe deposit box in a bank and revealed between $18,000 and $20,000 in cash, though his salary is less than $3000.

Subsequently, he made a complete "graft" confession to Internal Revenue men, disclosing in detail the operations of Washington gamblers in the county, methods and amounts of "payoff" to Prince Georges County officials.

The Washington Post also learned that though income tax returns and payments of at least 150 gamblers in Washington and Prince Georges County have been surveyed, there will be no early Federal action against them.

Shortage of Federal agents and prevalence of income tax evasions and subsequent investigations of a number of Washington physicians are holding up the gambler probe at top levels.

Demands of some physicians for cash payment of bills, which will not show on books, is a principal device used to evade full reports on their income, The Washington Post learned.

Special Corps Found

A special corps of Internal Revenue agents and deputy collectors has been formed, The Washington Post learned, to investigate the gamblers. These are the two lower-level groups of income tax investigators, the deputy collectors ordinarily screening returns up to about the $5000 level and the agents working on those above that level.

The Intelligence Unit of Internal Revenue ordinarily handles cases involving criminal fraud on taxes. This unit, which has only 20 agents for Washington and a large number of surrounding counties in Maryland and Virginia, is entering the gambling picture.

However, because of the "roadblock" of cases involving physicians, and others, they have not been able to put on a special campaign against the gamblers, though they work on the cases as fast as possible.

U. N. Reviews Czech Dispute Over Prague Clerk

Lake Success, June 24 (AP).—The U.N. gave a detailed account today of its controversy with the Czechoslovak government over Adolph Mudroch.

Mudroch is a 50-year-old Czechoslovak clerk in the U.N. information center in Prague, who has evaded questioning by security police by remaining in the information center offices since May 25.

One high U.N. official expressed the belief today the issue would be settled in a friendly way within a few days. A U. N. statement disclosed that Secretary-General Trygve Lie has told the Czechoslovak government that the U.N. would not shield Mudroch any further if assurances were given that the clerk would not be questioned regarding his U.N. duties.

Mudroch is wanted for questioning in connection "with suspicion of contacts with a group under trial for anti-state activities," the Czechoslovak government told Olav Rytter, director of the Prague office.

Dog Tale Tickles Staid Funnybones Of Churchmen

London, June 24 (AP). — What kind of a joke gives a preacher a real belly laugh?

"No thanks," said the woman. "My husband doesn't drink water and the dog can't read."

Leader Assails Non-Thinkers

100-Year Belief in World Woes Vindicated, Adventists Told

A Seventh Day Adventist leader yesterday told the denomination's Potomac Conference that Adventists have been vindicated because their stand "has not changed one iota from their premises of 100 years ago."

Speaking before 3000 persons in the Sligo SDA Church, Takoma Park, Md., Elder Henry F. Brown declared "Every first class thinker in the world today is a Seventh Day Adventist in our major premise that civilization is in a blind alley."

Elder Brown, who is traveling secretary of the General Conference, world headquarters of the faith, referred to clergy outside his church as "preachers of optimism." He criticized them because they had been forced to change their optimistic predictions of continuous progress many times during the past century.

"No longer do men of science scoff on the subject of the end of the world. Now they are predicting it. Adventists 100 years ago were called 'alarmists, pessimists and calamity-howlers' because of their insistence that the end of the world was coming soon. But now the scientists know they are right. The age of optimism is gone," he charged.

There is no remedy for the whole situation, the leader said, except for the second coming of Christ. Adventists have taught this for more than 100 years.

Elder Brown, who has just returned from a 28,000-mile 7½-month trip to South Africa, will speak again today at 8 p. m. He will recount his experiences in

Hawaii Factions to Resume Direct Strike Negotiations

Honolulu, June 24 (AP).—Waterfront employers and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union arranged today to resume direct negotiations in seeking settlement of Hawaii's 55-day-old longshore strike.

Negotiations broke off May 20. Acting Gov. Oren E. Long asked this morning that they be resumed

When the previous negotiations ended, the employers were offering a raise of 12 cents an hour from the old $1.40 an hour rate, but the 2000 strikers were standing pat for a 32-cent raise.

The employers withdrew their offer when Gov. Ingram M. Stainback appointed a fact-finding board. This board ended its hearings last Wednesday and is due to report by next Wednesday—unless the strike is settled before then.

Long said both industry and union representatives at a meeting in his office this morning "showed a real interest in making another attempt to arrive at a settlement."

United States District Judge J. Frank McLaughlin ordered the United States marshal to seize the Matson freighter Hawaiian Retailer and unload 2398 bags of dairy feed. The Hawaii Feed Co., which requested the order, said its employes and dairymen would do the unloading next week.

Label 'Scotch' Is Forbidden For Whisky Distilled in U. S.

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

It isn't Scotch whisky unless it's made in Scotland, or Irish whisky unless it comes from Ireland, the Alcohol Tax Unit ruled yesterday.

American distillers, however, may make imitation Scotch but it must be labeled "Scotch-type" with full details about its contents placed on the bottle. Also, it must be all whisky. Formerly American Scotch could be 20 per cent malt whisky and 80 per cent neutral spirits (dilute grain alcohol). Now it must be at least 20 per cent malt whisky and 80 per cent other whiskies, such as rye or bourbon.

Also—and this upsets a lot of present operations — Scotch-type whisky must not bear a name implying that it came from the Bonnie Land. Such words as "Scots," "Highland," "Heather" and the picturing of bagpipes or kilts on the labels are barred.

No Canadian or Irish whiskies may be made in the United States.

But, said the Alcohol unit, Americans may make vodka, the Russian national drink, to their hearts' content, if they follow the new rules. Vodka is in reality plain alcohol—it must be 190 proof when made. It can be made of anything from potatoes to garbage. But it must be "purified" by filtering through a specified number of inches in charcoal, to remove fusel oils, etc. It can't be cut to less than 60 proof—or 30 per cent alcohol.

Another big issue before the tax unit was settled. That permits whisky to be aged from now on in used barrels, as long as the label reveals that fact. Heretofore, storage in reused barrels was not permitted to count toward age. On July 11 the commission will consider whether whisky already aged in reused cooperage may be sold as aged whisky.

Truman Acts to End Postal Patronage

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman moved yesterday to take postmasterships—traditionally part of the election spoils—out of politics.

In addition he asked that the Postoffice Department be put on a business basis. His recommendations, made in a special message, followed almost to the letter the plan proposed last Armistice Day by the Hoover Commission for Government Reorganization. It was the first of the Hoover recommendations.

"It is an axiom of sound administration that authority should be commensurate with responsibility," Mr. Truman told Congress.

Nature of Job Would Change

"No authority of management is more important than that of selecting the personnel who are to operate the business. If the Postmaster General is to be held responsible for the efficient conduct of the postal service, he should be given full authority to appoint postmasters and other postal employes subject only to the provisions to the Civil Service and Classification Acts.

Not only would the recommendations, if enacted into law, do away with the time-honored custom of the President appointing about 21,000 first, second and third-class postmasters, but they would also definitely change the nature of the job of Postmaster General itself.

The recommendations would give full responsibility for running the department to the Postmaster General. This would so increase his duties that observers believed it would end the dual positions often in the past saved for victorious party chairmen, the title of Postmaster General but the job of political leader.

Final Say Up to Senate

In theory, postmasterships have been under civil service for years. But in fact they were chosen, usually by members of the House, from the three high applicants taking the examination. The Senate was given the final say on confirmation.

The political nature of the system was demonstrated a year ago when the Republican Eightieth Congress, expectant of victory last fall, held up more than 800 of President Truman's nominations for postoffice jobs.

Besides asking that appointments be made by the Postmaster General, Mr. Truman recommended:

1. That the department be operated with a business type budget, audit and accounting systems. The legislation, he said, should give it "the same degree of financial and operating flexibility as is now possessed by most Federal business enterprises.

2. That postal rates be raised to correspond with the increased cost of operations. Mr. Truman predicted a deficit of more than 400 million dollars for fiscal year 1950—starting next Friday, July 1.

Mr. Truman referred to the "maze of outmoded laws which stifled proper administration."

Under 58 Separate Items

"Currently," he said, "the postal service is operated under 58 separate appropriation items, each of which must be independently justified by the department officials, reviewed and approved by the Congress, and apportioned for each quarter by the Bureau of the Budget.

"The procedures prevent the department from operating any office as a fiscal unit with the result that the postal management, the President and the Congress are unable to obtain a complete and accurate picture of postal operations."

Law to Lapse

Installment Buying Curbs To End Soon

Government controls over installment buying by consumers will be allowed to expire at the end of this month, Senators said yesterday.

The wartime and postwar controls over the amount of down payments have been known as "Regulation W."

Senator Robertson (D., Va.), chairman of a Banking subcommittee which held hearings on a proposed extension, said his group "contemplates no further action."

Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.), of the full Banking Committee previously predicted the controls would be allowed to lapse.

Federal Reserve Board officials, who exercised the consumer credit restrictions, and President Truman had asked extension of this authority as a standby anti-inflation measure.

Originally, the controls applied on most consumers goods in short supply during the war.

New Blood Test For Cancer Adopted Here

The Huggins blood test for cancer will be used routinely on all patients examined in the Cancer Detection Clinic of Doctors Hospital here, it was announced yesterday.

The new blood sample test developed by Dr. Charles B. Huggins, University of Chicago surgery professor, has been hailed as a "reasonably sure" method of uncovering cancer, though not cancer's site, in the human body.

Dr. John O. Robben, clinic director, said the test will supplement rather than supplant other cancer detection tests given at the clinic. One of the chief reasons for use of the test here, he said, is to evaluate it in relation to the other, localized detection techniques.

The Huggins test, its procedures and its potentialities, were announced publicly by the American Cancer Society on April 16. It was then described by Dr. Shields Warren, director of the Atomic Energy Commission's division of biology medicine as "perhaps the greatest single advance ever made in the fight against cancer."

Described as "simple and inexpensive," it consists of heating a sample of the subject's blood after addition of a chemical, iodoacetate. Normal blood so treated will not clot after a certain amount of heating. Blood from a cancer victim takes much longer.

Record Depression Already Begun, Sen. Malone Says

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 24 (U.P.).—Senator George W. Malone, (R., Nev.) told Young Republicans today, "We're going into the greatest depression this country has ever seen." He said the decline already had begun.

Malone warned of depression at a convention of the Young Republican National Federation. Earlier farm and labor leaders had told the convention why they were dissatisfied with the policies of the GOP and what the GOP could do about it.

The Nevada Senator said the beginning of the "depression" could be seen in the shutdown of textile mills in New England and copper mines in Western States. However, he said economic damage from the "depression" might be lessened by speedy revision of the free trade policies of the administrations of the last 15 years.

Farmingdale, N. Y., June 24 (AP).—The body of Sergt. John Ybarbo of Goliad, Tex., slain by his wife in Germany last September in a bedroom quarrel, was buried today in Long Island National Cemetery.

The Army Department said Mrs. Wilma Ybarbo was not present, nor was any member of his family.

Girl, 2½, Dies After Shock By Electric Fixture in Home

A 2½-year-old girl was pronounced dead at Providence Hospital at 2:30 p.m. yesterday, apparently of an electric shock received 20 minutes earlier when she touched an electric plug in her home, 904 7th st. sw.

The child, Karroll Jean McDuffie, was alone in the living room when the accident occurred, according to her aunt, Marylin McDuffie, who discovered the youngster with the plug still in her hand after she heard a "moan."

The child's mother, Jean McDuffie, also was at home at the time.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald withheld a death certificate pending further investigation. He said, however, he believed the child pulled the wall plug with her right hand, holding onto a radiator near by with her left, thus causing a ground. There were flesh burns on the left side of the body and chest, the coroner said.

College Unit's D. C. Branch Changes Name

The Washington Branch, American Association of University Women, yesterday changed its name to University Women's Club, Inc.

Representatives of the branch appeared at the office of the Recorder of Deeds here to make the change. It was prompted by the national organization's amending of its by-laws at Seattle Thursday to make mandatory admission of qualified Negro women to branch membership.

Meanwhile, in Seattle, Dr. Elizabeth Conrad, head of the delegation from the Washington branch, said her group was not allowed to present its side of the case on the "Negro issue."

"We came to the convention to give our side of the story and we were never given one moment's hearing. We never received time in which officially to present the Washington case."

The Associated Press reported that a spokesman for Dr. Althea Hottel, University of Pennsylvania dean of women and newly reelected president, said, "the Washington delegates had the same opportunity as every other delegate to present the Washington case."

Earlier Dr. Hottel disclosed she had received a formal communication announcing the branch's withdrawal from the association.

According to the Associated Press Mrs. Ruth V. Lyons, Washington, attended the convention as a representative of a minority group of about 200 members of the branch. She said she came as a national member, not as an official branch delegate, and also on "her own." The entire Washington branch comprises about 800.

The minority group, she explained, asked the national AAUW board for a charter last year shortly before a Federal Court granted a temporary injunction against the association. The association was restrained, in the order, from ousting the Washington branch.

"That request still stands," Mrs. Lyons commented. "We plan that as soon as the present injunction is dissolved, as it is expected to be following the convention's action, that we will go ahead with the organization of a separate branch of the AAUW in Washington."

'5 Percenters'

Senators Set Probe of All U. S. Buying

NYHT News Service

Investigation was ordered yesterday of all Government procurement activities in an effort to uncover and stamp out the practices of Washington "5 percenters" who represent themselves as "peddlers of influence."

This probe by the Senate investigating committee was announced by its chairman, Senator Hoey (D., N. C.), after the New York Herald Tribune disclosed the activities of one "5 percenters"—James V. Hunt, a former lieutenant colonel in the Quartermaster Corps.

The committee has received "tips" on the activities of other "5 percenters" who have demanded large contingent fees for procuring Government business.

Senator Hoey made it plain the investigation is a direct outgrowth of the committee's preliminary probe of the Hunt case.

"The questions raised by the investigation are important and require thoughtful consideration in the public interest," the committee chairman declared.

Senator Hoey emphasized that the committee's probe will have a twofold purpose:

1. To uncover and run out of business "5 percenters" who collect fat fees from businessmen on the tacit understanding that "some worthwhile conniving will take place."

2. To seek legislative action to remedy Government procurement procedures so small businessmen will not feel they have to hire "5 percenters" to get contracts.

The committee hopes to dispel the "fallacious idea" that "a little dishonesty is the best policy" in dealing with the Government, its chairman noted.

Congressmen Asked to Back 'Human Lab' at Hagerstown

By The Associated Press

Congressmen studying health problems were asked yesterday to support a "human laboratory" at Hagerstown, Md., and an Arctic health institute in Alaska.

The Hagerstown project was visualized as an expansion of studies of chronic diseases that have been going on since 1921.

Dr. Perry F. Prather of Hagerstown, Md., deputy and Washington County health officer, told a House Commerce Subcommittee:

"We should have methods by which to study and treat families that have a sick member just as we study and treat individuals that have a diseased organ."

He recommended Hagerstown as "the major center for research" along this line.

Dr. George S. Perrott of the Public Health Service said it would be a "human laboratory" that would supplement other research in specific problems like cancer.

Before the subcommittee is a resolution that would put Congress on record as supporting the Hagerstown project.

Dr. Ernest F. Poole of Hagerstown, secretary of the Washington County Medical Society, testified the project has been of definite value to the society and to the community.

36 in Big Bus Bound for D. C. Escape Death

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—The driver and 35 passengers of a Greyhound bus had a miraculous escape from death about dawn today when it veered off U. S. 40 north of here and hit an embankment.

No one was killed. Two or three were injured seriously but are expected to recover. Most got nothing worse than cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Dorothy Hendren, 31, of Woodbridge, Va., was one of the more seriously injured, with possible fractures of the pelvis and right hip. Her 8-year-old son, Jerry, had severe stomach pains, with the exact extent of his injuries undetermined but apparently confined to abdominal bruises.

Baltimore County police filed a reckless driving charge against Gerald Philip Thibodeau, 25-year-old bus driver from Philadelphia.

Patrolman William Dreyer said Tribodeau told of becoming drowsy, then swerving to avoid a car.

Thibodeau had started driving at 10:10 last night when the bus left New York for Washington. The accident was about 3:35 a.m., some 12 miles northeast of Baltimore.

Some passengers were thrown half the length of the aisle when the bus knocked out the foot-thick fenders of a culvert, leaped across a 15-foot ditch at the side of the roadway and banged into the embankment.

Among those treated after the accident for minor injuries were Miss Dolly McDowell, 27, of 1434 Perry pl. nw., Washington, and Miss Mary Ann Morin, 39, of Arlington Farms, Va.

Senate Sets Vote Tuesday on Plan For Injunctions

The Senate yesterday agreed to vote Tuesday on whether a new labor law should provide for court orders to block national emergency strikes.

With the agreement leaders called off a Senate session they had planned on holding today.

The present Taft-Hartley labor law authorizes injunctions against emergency strikes. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and others want to keep it in whatever new law Congress enacts.

Administration men want to keep it out. They say they are unified at last and will win the big test.

Figures Show Ominous Rise In Polio Cases

United States may be heading into an epidemic year of infantile paralysis, it was indicated yesterday by a marked rise of polio cases.

Already 36 per cent more cases have been reported this year over last year's figures, according to Public Health Service weekly statistics. Better reporting and diagnosis account for part of the increase, it was noted.

But if 1949's present rate is maintained, the year's total would approach the peak of 30,000 cases reached in 1916.

Despite the year's rise to a total of 2309 cases to the beginning of this week, the Public Health Service reported, there were no local concentrations suggesting epidemic except in a limited portion of Texas. Last year's nationwide total for the corresponding period was 1697.

In the State-by-State breakdown of polio cases reported till this week's beginning, the Public Health Service tally sheets showed three cases this year in the District to none reported up to the same date late year.

Maryland showed 13 new cases this year to only one for the same period in 1948, and Virginia's score was 12 this year and the same number for the corresponding period of last year. North Carolina, which labored through a polio epidemic last year, showed 50 cases so far in 1949 to 204 to the same date last year.

Miners' Vacation Begun, May Turn Into Wide Strike

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 24 (U.P.).—John L. Lewis' 480,000 coal miners began their annual 10-day vacation tonight as the forerunner of what may turn into a Nation-wide strike under the mine chieftain's "no contract, no work" policy.

The current soft coal contract runs out next Thursday in the midst of the holiday, and negotiations here and at Bluefield, W. Va., for a new agreement were still far from success when weekend recesses were called today.

Lewis personally served notice on the northern and western operators taking part in the so-called "national" negotiations here that the United Mine Workers will not sign a new pact without improvements in wages, hours, welfare fund arrangements and some plan for stabilizing employment.

Radio Station Sale At Louisville Opposed in FCC

A Federal Communications Commission examiner recommended yesterday that Crosley Broadcasting Corp. be denied permission to buy the radio properties of WHAS, Inc., at Louisville, Ky.

The WHAS properties, owned by the Courier-Journal and Louisville Times Co., consists of standard, FM, television, experimental and remote pick-up stations.

Crosley sought permission to buy these facilities for $1,925,000.

Examiner Leo Resnick held the transaction would violate the commission's rules against multiple ownership of the same type of broadcasting stations in the same general area.

Andrews Heads Md. U. Psychology Department

Dr. Thomas G. Andrews, 2844 Buchanan st., Arlington, has been appointed professor of psychology and head of the psychology department at the University of Maryland, it was announced last night by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president.

Dr. Andrews is a graduate of the University of Southern California and the University of Nebraska. During World War II and subsequently, he was with the War Department.

Unit Votes 75-Cent Pay Floor

The Senate Labor Committee yesterday unanimously approved a bill to increase the present minimum wage of 40 cents an hour to 75 cents.

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.), a committee member, said the Labor Department figures it would mean pay raises for about 1,250,000 workers in interstate commerce who now make less than 75 cents an hour.

Pepper said the bill had been broadened so that it included only an additional 100,000 nonfarm workers, engaged in processing agriculture products in so-called "areas of production."

The House Labor Committee also has approved a 75-cent minimum wage bill.

Prince Georges Sets Slot Machine Drive

Waiter Accused

Dismissal Is Denied in Gaming Case

A request to dismiss gambling charges against Henry E. Fish was denied yesterday by District Court Judge Edward M. Curran, who granted a fifth continuance in the case.

Fish's attorney, Denny Hughes, protested when Assistant United States Attorney Arthur McLaughlin asked for a week's postponement for arguments on several motions.

The case had already been continued a number of times, Hughes declared, and he then asked for dismissal of the charges since "the Government doesn't have anything against my client anyway."

McLaughlin stated that his office would dispose of the pending arguments next week and Judge Curran granted a week's continuance.

Fish, a waiter at Hammel's Restaurant, was arrested March 25, when Government agents raided the restaurant at 416 10th st. nw.

Arguments on motions in the case of another waiter, Walter C. (Danny) Plummer, arrested in the same raid, were continued to an indefinite date by Judge Curran.

A similar delay in motions arguments for Philip Samakow, who was arrested in another of the related raids, was granted by Judge Richmond B. Keech, because Samakow's lawyer, William H. Collins, was out of town and could not appear for the scheduled hearing.

An immediate Prince Georges County police drive against slot machine payoffs was ordered yesterday as a direct result of Thursday's Circuit Court action, invalidating the county's new slot-machine law.

Police Chief Ralph W. Brown said he had ordered his force to "crack down" on all violators pending instructions from the county commissioners, who meet Tuesday to discuss the court ruling. Operators of cash-paying machines not only are liable to arrest, Brown said, but their machines will be confiscated.

Although cash-paying machines were approved in a referendum June 2, they never have become legal. The commissioners were preparing to issue licenses when Judge Charles C. Marbury declared the law unconstitutional due to a defective title.

Despite this, machines were said to be operating openly in some taverns, where they had been used "for amusement only" prior to the June 2 referendum. Chief Brown said he issued the "crackdown" order on the strength of Judge Marbury's ruling.

County school department funds appeared to be most directly affected by the court's action. Barring a successful appeal from the ruling, the school board will not receive the anticipated $250,000 slot-machine tax receipts this year.

Disappointed school officials said they had not "counted their chickens before they were hatched." Slot machine funds played no part in the recently proposed school budget. The board did provide tentatively for spending about $80,000 of the slot machine fund to employ additional clerks and teachers. The new teachers would have relieved principals now teaching in some overcrowded elementary schools.

In allotting the slot machine funds to the school board, the commissioners specified that the new revenue could be used only for operation and maintenance, not for the building program. Construction is financed by loans from the State educational pool.

Big Gambler 'Play' Bared

with a special subpena created by a special law long before income taxes were devised, and considered one of the most potent in American jurisprudence.

It was such a subpena that brought one Washington and Prince Georges County gambler to telephone his attorney. The attorney apparently was not apprised of what was in the safe deposit box because he told the gambler:

"Sure, open it up to them.

Then came the disclosure of the more than $200,000. Internal Revenue men also have authority to impound assets under certain circumstances, which they did in that case.

The investigation of this particular gambler is not yet completed, so no recommendation by the investigating agents has yet been made.

He is reputed to be one of Washington's "top" gaming entrepreneurs. The agents also are hard at work on two or three others. Because of the monumental amounts of their annual "handle" involved, 10 million dollars or upward each, tracing of income transactions is a long and difficult process, despite the special subpena facilities open to the agents.

A high official of the Department of Justice, which is cooperating enthusiastically with the Bureau of Internal Revenue, indicated yesterday that criminal prosecutions will not get under way immediately.

When the investigators "wrap up" a case and recommend it for prosecution, it then goes to the general counsel's office in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. If facts and evidence presented in the report indicate criminal prosecution, the case is then turned over to the tax division, of the criminal branch of the Department of Justice.

It is surveyed again there and if deemed to "hold water" it goes to the Federal district attorney in the area involved. In the case of Washington and Prince Georges Counties, this is the office of Bernard uinn, Federal district attorney for Baltimore.

The confession by the one Prince Georges County law enforcement official is known to involve both gamblers and other county officials. However, by itself, the statement is not considered completely competent evidence by the Internal Revenue Bureau and the Department of Justice.

All its ramifications and allegations must be checked with bank records, new car purchases or transfers, safe deposit boxes and a mass of other evidence. This is another reason why no immediate action is in prospect by Federal authorities.

Some cases covering liquor black market activities four years ago are just now being processed for prosecution at Baltimore, indicating how long it may take for a complete cleanup of the Prince Georges County gambling situation. However, the normal three-year statute of limitations does not apply, courts have held, in income tax cases. The reason is that the fraud, if any, continues from year to year and is thus "up to date" for a prosecution.

The top-level Intelligence Unit agents who are handling the indicated criminal fraud aspects of the cases involving Prince Georges County gamblers are members of the same organization that handled the Al Capone, the Kansas City Pendergast machine, Huey Long, and other investigations.

Footpad Robs Lawyer's Wife

A holdup man, who followed Mrs. Louis P. Lavery, wife of a Veterans Administraton lawyer, into her 16th street apartment yesterday, escaped with $16 in cash and a wristwatch, the victim said.

Mrs. Lavery, 2651 16th st. nw., said she left the door—No. 308—open when she entered because her arms were full of groceries, and found the intruder in the foyer when she returned from the kitchen.

She said the man threatened to kill her if she didn't stop screaming, then asked for her money.

"When I went into the kitchen to get my wallet he followed me and picked up an icepick," she said.

Police sent a lookout for a light-skinned Negro, about 30, wearing a red shirt.

A man answering the same description slugged, choked and robbed Mrs. Eulalia Colwell, of 1416 R st. nw. Thursday, after impersonating a plumber to enter the apartment.

3 Men Arrested In 2 Numbers Lottery Cases

Police charged three men with operation of a lottery and posession of numbers slips in two cases yesterday.

Manuel Weston, 50, 1434 Montello ave. ne., and Marcus T. Dean, 42, 1204 10th st. ne., were arrested by vice squad detectives about 11 a. m. at 3d and L sts. ne. Marked money was found on them, detectives said.

Weston, they said, was seated in a car when they approached. Dean was standing nearby. As the officers came up, Dean tossed some numbers slips in the car, and Weston, already in the auto, tossed his in the street, police reported.

A short time later, vice squad raiders arrested Walter Harrington, 40, 28 Q st. ne., in a garage in the 1100 block of 3d st. ne. The three men were arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and their cases continued under $1500 bond each.

First Churchill Painting Sold

London, June 24 (AP).—Winston Churchill parted with one of his paintings today for $5,250. He never sold one before.

All he got out of it was that glowing feeling of appreciation and an idea of what other "Churchills" might bring at auction.

The money—1,250 guineas—went to the YWCA.

Mrs. Churchill wheedled the 74-year-old wartime Prime Minister into putting "The Blue Room, Trent Park 1934" on the auction block at a YWCA benefit she was promoting.

Her letter of request was written on YWCA stationery and started, "Dear Mr. Churchill——."

The buyer was a Brazilian newspaper chain owner, Assis Chaeaubriand. The autographed 19½x13-inch work will be presented to the Sao Paulo Art Museum.

Bidding began at 500 guineas ($2100) and was brisk from there on.

Sir Alfred Cummings, former president of the Royal Academy, has described "The Blue Room" as a good piece of painting."

On the basis of today's price, Churchill has a fortune tied up in his own paintings. Friends estimated he has completed a couple of hundred canvases.

Woman Traps Man Sought As Swindler

Chicago, June 24 (U.P.).—Sigmund B. Engel, hunted by police across the Nation as a swindler of women, was captured in a trap set by a woman "victim" today, and was brought face to face with Mrs. Reseda Corrigan, whom he bilked of $8700.

She tried to hit him.

"You thing, how can you do this thing?" she said.

Mrs. Corrigan, 39, a red-headed widow, was the latest of about 50 women whom Engel allegedly tricked out of money.

Engel was trapped in an exclusive luggage shop on Michigan Boulevard.

Capt. Timothy Lyon confronted Engel at the police station.

"Are you Engel?" the captain asked. "Are you the man who can get money out of women?"

Engel said, "Yes."

He denied he had married 50 women, as police estimated.

"Why not even King Solomon could do that," he exclaimed, "and he was a pretty good man."

New York police describe Engel as "a matrimonial swindler de luxe."

Sophoulis, Greek Premier, Dies Following Heart Attack at 88

By Edgar C. Clark

Athen Greece, June 24 (U.P.).—Aged Premier Themistocles Sophoulis died of a heart attack today, 24 hours after predicting in a political testament that another war would leave either democracy or communism in complete control of the world.

He advised the Western world to rearm as the only way to prevent a Communist onslaught but said it was possible for democracy and communism to exist in the same world if they did not interfere with each other.

Late tonight King Paul asked Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris, Populist, to form a new government. Tsaldaris served as Premier once before, in 1946.

Sophoulis, 88, died at his summer residence in the Kifissia suburb. He was about to leave for the airport to welcome Queen Frederika back from Switzerland, where she had visited her ailing father, the Duke of Brunswick.

Seven months ago today, despite his years, Sophoulis survived a heart attack which his physicians expected to be fatal.

This correspondent had asked him yesterday afternoon during a visit:

"What would you advise to Greece in the event of your death?"

"I would advise . . . a liberal democratic policy . . . I believe this is the policy by which all the problems which face our country can be solved in the safest and most satisfactory way," Sophoulis replied.

The Western world, he said, ought to follow the Truman doctrine of arming democratic nations against aggression.

"That is the only way possible to prevent an offensive against the West," he said.

"It is unnecessary, I think, to have a new war . . . I hope it will be avoided."

"Do you believe in the eventual victory of the West in case of another war?" he was asked.

"I would lose all my hopes for the perpetuity of our traditional civilization if I ever conceived the thought that the Western world would be unable to resist such an offensive victoriously," Sophoulis said.

Parliament was informed of Sophoulis' death and a three-day period of national mourning was proclaimed.

Sophoulis' body was brought into Athens tonight for embalming. It will lie in State at the Cathedral Saturday. The funeral will be held Sunday.

Sophoulis was born on the Isle of Samos off the Turkish coast November 24, 1859. He chopped years off his real age as he grew older, but reference books give 1859 as his birth year.

Samos and Greece were under Turkish rule when Sophoulis was born. He became a lecturer on archeology at Athens University. But he was an intense patriot and in 1900 he abandoned his university career to enter politics.

He organized a revolt against the Turks in 1908 and was sentenced to death.

He escaped and led an invasion which freed Samos in 1912 at the beginning of the Balkan Wars.

Sophoulis, at 57, fought in the Salonika uprising when Greek patriots sought to take their country into World War I on the Allied side.

Body of Prison Bus Escapee Found in River

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 24 (AP). — Guard Captain Hill Lewis said today the body of one of eight men who fled a prison bus near here Wednesday had been found in the West Fork River.

Lewis identified the body as that of Jimmy D. Fortner, 35, who was serving a 2-to-10-year sentence from Mingo County for auto theft.

Air Force Chiefs Indorse Plans For Strength of 48 Groups

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Air Force chiefs yesterday backed Administration plans for a 48-group force next year.

Chairman Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee told reporters that Air Secretary Symington and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, had indorsed the budget-approved strength.

The House added 850 million dollars to President Truman's budget to provide an Air Force of 58 groups, plus additional money for aircraft procurement. Thomas and other members of the subcommittee have indicated they probably will eliminate this in their search for economies.

The Oklahoma Senator said, however, his group would not get around to voting on specific provisions of the 15 billion dollar defense spending measure until the latter part of next week. The bill will not go to the Senate floor until after July 1, he added.

Thomas said his subcommittee has learned that the cancellation of the Navy's super aircraft carrier, USS United States, will cost the taxpayers 17 million dollars. Congress appropriated funds to start the vessel and its keel was laid at Newport News, Va. Then Defense Secretary Johnson ordered the Navy to cancel the contract.

Under the newly announced plan to spend 80 million dollars to modernize two older flattops, Thomas said, "we will be spending nearly 100 million dollars and still have only two old carriers." The United States would have cost 189 million dollars.

Time Ripe to Act On Pact, Dulles Says

John Foster Dulles told President Truman yesterday that the political and psychological situation in Europe "demands quick ratification of the Atlantic Pact and the active organization under it of an effective common defense."

Dulles, delegate to the United Nations Assembly and Republican foreign policy expert, is just back from the Council of Foreign Ministers in Paris, where he served as an adviser to Secretary of State Acheson.

He handed reporters this statement as he left the President's office yesterday:

"I discussed with President Truman the gains that had been registered at the Paris meeting of the C.F.M.

"I expressed the view that we now have a great opportunity to consolidate freedom in western Europe and make it an effective force, if we act vigorously to realize the full possibilities of the European Recovery Program and Atlantic Pact.

"The political and psychological situation in Europe demands quick ratification of the Atlantic Pact and the active organization under it of an effective common defense.

"The economic situation calls for using the European Recovery Program more vigorously than ever to unite the participating countries into a single broad market. If we do that, the economic productivity that the program is stimulating will largely stay in Europe, to raise the standard of living of its people.

"But if monetary and trade barriers divide western Europe into many small economic compartments, then the surpluses of each may come into unhealthy competition with our own productive labor."

Asked if he favored American arms aid to signers of the Atlantic Pact, Dulles replied he did and his statement meant just that.

two categories. The first is the technical, scientific and managerial knowledge necessary to economic development. This category includes not only medical and educational knowledge, and assistance and advice in such fields as sanitation, communications, road building and governmental services, but also, and perhaps most important, assistance in the survey of resources and in planning for long-range economic development.

"The second category is production goods—machinery and equipment—and financial assistance in the creation of productive enterprise. The underdeveloped areas need capital for port and harbor development, roads and communications, irrigation and drainage projects, as well as for public utilities and the whole range of extractive, processing and manufacturing industries.

Capital From Abroad Needed

"Much of the capital required can be provided by those areas themselves, in spite of their low standard of living. But much must come from abroad.

"The two categories of aid are closely related. Technical assistance is necessary to lay the ground work for productive investment. Investment, in turn, brings with it technical assistance. In general, however, technical surveys of resources and the possibilities of economic development must precede substantial capital investment. Furthermore, in many of the areas concerned, technical assistance in improving sanitation, communications or education is required to create conditions in which capital investment can be fruitful."

Behind the message was not only a realization of what the President called the "grinding poverty" and the "lack of economic opportunity" for hundreds of millions of people in Africa, Asia and certain parts of Latin America. There was also the realization, borne in upon this Government during the first year of the Marshall Plan, that Europe and the world generally badly needed to use untapped resources of food and raw materials.

Need for Help Seen

It was seen clearly in Washington that technical help and capital investment would be needed if Africa, for example, were to produce vast new supplies of minerals or vegetable oils, or if the parched lands of the Middle East were to grow the food they grew in ancient times.

There was also a political basis for the "bold new program" which the President and his advisers envisaged. The message yesterday recalled that "in spite of their age-old economic and social handicaps," the peoples of the backward areas have been "stirred and awakened" in recent decades. If their hopes of progress are frustrated or disappointed, the President said, "they may turn to false doctrines which hold that the way of progress lies through tyranny."

"For the United States the great awakening of these peoples holds tremendous promise," the message said. "It is not only a promise that new and stronger nations will be associated with us in the cause of human freedom. It is also a promise of new economic strength and growth for ourselves."

Guarantees Controversial

The most controversial part of the message related to the guaranteeing of private investments against risks. This had been the subject of long argument among the executive agencies, with some wanting sweeping guarantees to protect investors and to encourage the outflow of private capital.

In the end, the President left the decision up to the Export-Import Bank, a Government-financed institution lending under congressional charter for the promotion of American foreign trade.

He said the guarantes at first would be largely experimental. Some investments, he said, might need only a guarantee that profits could be converted into dollars; others might need protection against the danger that foreign governments might expropriate them.

Experience to Be Teacher

"It is impossible at this time to write a standard guarantee," the President said. "The bank will, of course, be able to require the payment of premiums for such protection, but there is no way to determine what premium rates will be most appropriate in the long run. Only experience can provide answers to these questions."

The President suggested yesterday that bilateral treaties might help to protect American investors against extraordinary risks abroad. Such treaties are already being negotiated with Uruguay and several other countries.

"In negotiating such treaties," said the President, "we do not, of course, ask privileges for American capital greater than those granted to other investors in underdeveloped countries or greater than we ourselves grant in this country. We believe that American enterprise should not waste local resources, should provide adequate wages and working conditions for local labor, and should bear an equitable share of the burden of local taxes.

Suggests Vesting of Powers

"At the same time, we believe that investors will send their capital abroad on an increasing scale only if they are given assurance against risk or loss through expropriation without compensation, unfair or discriminatory treatment, destruction through war or rebellion, or the inability to convert their earnings into dollars."

The President did not propose setting up a new Government agency to administer the program. Instead, he recommended vesting administrative power in the President, and letting him delegate authority to the Secretary of State or other officials.

In practice, this probably would mean the creation of a new White House agency which could make full use of the experience and talents of the technical agencies of the Government. The Agriculture Department has been especially active in technical assistance work abroad for many years.

Record Military Budget Approved in France

Paris, June 24 (AP).—The French National Assembly approved today this country's largest military budget since the war.

On a show of hands the deputies passed a budget of 383 billion francs (about $1,160,000,000). Only the Communists voted against it. All of the costs for waging the current war in Indo-China were not included.

Last year's military budget was 33 billion francs less.

Marquess Orders Band 'Serenade' of Princess

London, June 24 (U.P.).—The Marquess of Blandford sent the band over to Princess Margaret's restaurant table last night to play the torch song that begins: "I Walk Alone With Heavy Heart."

Margaret, escorted by Peter Ward, son of the Earl of Dudley, laughed and nodded to the marquess, a possible suitor, but did not invite him to her table.

Commons Passes Bill

London, June 24 (U.P.).—The House of Commons debated pigs today, and the most humane way of killing them.

A bill to make sure they are slaughtered as mercifully as possible was passed after Conservative S. Ramsay said:

"The pig is most courageous and I am sure he would not squeal while having his throat cut without good reason."

Nationalist Blockade Detains Egyptian Liner at Shanghai

Shanghai, June 24 (U.P.).—Nationalist warships blockading Shanghai held the Egyptian liner, Star of Suez, at gun point in the Yangtze River all last night, and seized her Norwegian pilot before allowing her to proceed, the captain of the big motorship reported today.

Capt. Walter Rothwell said in a radiogram that his ship was halted by a patrol vessel which fired eight warning shots across her bow. Passengers spent an uneasy night in lifejackets, fearing that the ship might be attacked and sunk.

Rothwell reported the Star was allowed to resume her voyage to Kobe, Japan, after a 13-hour delay. Nationalist naval officers boarded the ship, checked cargo and passengers, and took off Pilot Alf Holthe, "apparently under arrest."

The action occurred two days before the effective date of the scheduled Nationalist blockade of Communist-held ports.

Judith Coplon Now Distrusts Gubitchev

do not know who has participated, but I feel a frame-up."

"Do you think the Attorney General of the United States has participated in framing you?" Kelley asked.

"I do not know who has participated in this."

"Do you think," Kelley went on, "that my associate, Mr. Whearty, has participated in framing you?"

"Yes," Miss Coplon said.

From his chair next to Kelley's at the prosecution table, Raymond P. Whearty, first assistant to the Assistant Attorney General in Charge of the Justice epartment's Criminal Division, looked studiously over his tortoise-shell glasses at the defendant. In the days before he was her assistant prosecutor he was Miss Coplon's chief in the Foreign Agents Registration Section, used to call her "Judy," once got her a raise, once helped give her a luncheon.

Kelley waited, glanced down at the pencil in his hands, then suddenly straight back into Miss Coplon's eyes.

"Do you think I have participated in framing you?"

The defendant's face twisted in a grimace of hate as she looked, for a moment not speaking, at her prosecutor.

"Lowest Questions"

"I understand, from your testimony," she said then, "that you came on the scene later. But I will say that you have participated in asking me some of the lowest questions that I have ever heard."

The prosecutor's face was a mask as he replied softly: "You had some strange doings, Madam."

Thus again there came into the atmosphere, if unspoken, Miss Coplon's admitted nights in out-of-town hotels and apartments here with H. P. Shapiro, Justice Department attorney. Under Kelley's questioning she had denied sexual intimacy with Shapiro at any of the mentioned times.

This cross-examination had been calculated to break Miss Coplon's claim that she was deeply in love with Gubitchev about the time some of the nights with Shapiro occurred.

Asks About Foley

In regard to the "conspiracy," Kelley next asked the defendant about the man who was her chief in the Foreign Agents Registration section at the time of her arrest.

"Do you think that William E. Foley participated in the frame-up?"

The mention of this name particularly unloosed Miss Coplon's voice:

"I definitely think Mr. William E. Foley, who sat here and testified, from the words he told me and from the things he did, including that Amtorg slip which he told me to take to New York, definitely participated in this frame-up. He wanted to make sure I had something in my pocketbook. This whole arrest was conceived. . . ."

She referred to one of the many documents found in her purse. This was a "plant"—notes, from an FBI report, which she claims Foley ordered her to take to New York that morning of March 4 and watched her put in the flap of her pocketbook.

Says He Might Have Told

Kelley mentioned that she "expected" to meet Gubitchev again that night, and at the mention of the man she claims she once deeply loved, her voice rose:

"I did not (know that). I do not know who expected me. They might have expected me to meet Gubitchev again. This whole case is so fishy it smells to high heaven. For all I know Gubitchev told them. He made a phone call around the 15th st. region and within 10 minutes I was arrested. I would like to know who this Gubitchev is, too," she shrieked of the man who, along with her, faces charges of conspiracy to commit espionage in New York, in addition to the espionage charge against her here.

"Do you think," Kelley's voice tagged in as this explosion abated, "that Mr. Nathan Lenvin participated in framing you?"

"Not Around Much"

"I do not know what Mr. Nathan Lenvin's part was in this," Miss Coplon screamed back, "because Mr. Nathan Lenvin was not around much. He might have sat around and informed people I was making data slips. I do not know what Mr. Lenvin did. I know at the present time—and I have seen Mr. Lenvin—he is still an employe of the Department of Justice under Mr. Whearty."

Kelley asked: "You think, last but not least, that Mr. Shapiro and Mr. Gubitchev participated?"

Defense Attorney Archibald Palmer's objection to the form of the question was drowned out as Miss Coplon rushed to answer about the two men she claims were vying for her love in the early months of this year:

"As far as Mr. Shapiro goes, I think that he participated very much in framing me. As far as Mr. Gubitchev goes, I still don't know. This is still to me a great mystery. I do not understand all these things. If you people were waiting and expecting something to be passed," the unhesitating words rushed out, "why didn't I pass it to him before? Why didn't I pass it on the bus? Why didn't I pass it when . . ."

"You Knew It Was Not Safe"

The 6-foot prosecutor's voice slashed in: "Because you knew the FBI were on your trail. Because you knew it was not safe."

"What do you mean, I knew it was not safe?" Miss Coplon shrieked. "I had no idea who in the heck was following me. For all I know, the NKVD (Russian secret police) was running around there. Mr. Gubitchev thought some such thing. I know why that paper was planted in my pocketbook, so when I was arrested there would be something in my pocketbook . . ."

Kelley came back to other documents found in Miss Coplon's purse by the FBI agents who arrested her.

"This character study of Stevenson, Lorraine Sinderbrand and Alvin Sinderbrand—not one of these persons had any part whatsoever in the fact that those documents were in your purse that night, isn't that true?"

"Character Sketches" in Purse

Contents of the purse included "character sketches" on Alfred B. Stevenson and Mr. and Mrs. Sinderbrand. Miss Coplon claims the sketches were for use in a novel she was writing, but the Government charges they represented efforts on her part to supply the Russians with information on potential Soviet spy recruits.

Miss Coplon admitted: "None of these people were responsible in any way for these documents being in my purse that night. This was material. . . ."

"That is your whole responsibility?" Kelley cut in sharply.

"They did not know they were going to be in my purse," Miss Coplon said again.

"You, and you only, knew?" Kelley repeated. "You, and only you, were responsible for the presence of those documents, and all of them, in your purse that night?"

"That is true."

She Warmed Up

"But I was not responsible for the document on the Amtorg Trading Corp., the second decoy. And God knows how many decoys and all kinds of frame-ups you have put in this case. I was not responsible for that. Mr. Foley was responsible for that. I would like to hear Mr. Foley say that he was not. I don't doubt he won't he was not.

She continued: "I have heard Mr. Foley testify. From every single thing he says, as far as I am concerned, he has told a tissue of lies, he has told a tissue of lies about this internal security, the foreign agents. He said he took me off. Maybe he thinks now he should have taken me off, and he did not do it adequately, according to you people. He never took me off. I had material. He gave an impression that I had no authority to look at these reports. I certainly had authority to look at these reports. All of his statements, as far as I am concerned, except a few statements—yes, I was an analyst, and that—were false. I never heard of such ridiculous things. His whole statement on the top secret, which I carry out in here, that statement of his—of course, he made interjections, but it sounded to me about as ridiculous as he sounded that day with the top secret report. That consists of what? Consists of material from newspaper files. A real top secret report, yes!

She Asks Questions

"All your decoys," she continued, hands flying, "this custodial detention, why did he tell me about that? Why did he tell me about all of these things? What kind of bait were you trying to use? What did you think he was doing? Weren't you happy? I do not mean, weren't you happy. What I meant to say was, was it necessary for Mr. Foley to come and take a piece of paper and put a memo down, point to a memo? If that is not entrapment, I do not know what that is.

"Point to a memo, say make a note of it, tell me to take it home with me—if that is not a frame-up," she shouted, "I do not know what is.

"If this whole thing isn't a frame-up . . . why did all the FBI agents say they did not know I was going to be arrested? It is ridiculous on the face. Of course, they knew I was going to be arrested. Mr. Whearty was going into New York. What for? Mr. Mendenhall (an FBI agent) was going into New York. What for? Mr. Granville (an FBI agent) told that woman that held me while they stripped me, he told her to stay there and act as a matron," she shrieked, here eyes burning.

"How Did They Know?"

"How did they know? What through, tapped phone wires, or because Gubitchev was some sort of plant or counterespionage agent, which you were going to use to trap me in some sort of way? I don't understand this whole case! All I know is I have been framed."

Kelley waited to make sure the defendant had finished, then returned to a question that may be vital in this case:

"Answer this question yes or no and then give us as long an explanation as you want. Is it not a fact that you and only you had any responsibility for placing these documents (the ones about Stevenson and the Sinderbrands) in your purse and having them in your possession when you met Gubitchev that night?"

"I have answered that question," the defendant said.

Judge Upholds Her

"She has answered," Judge Albert L. Reeves said.

"She has answered it three times," Defense Attorney Palmer said.

"She has answered it," Judge Reeves repeated.

And so Judith Coplon had: that she and only she was responsible for the presence in her purse of the "character sketch" documents.

So that about these, in any case, there appeared to be no question of "frame-up."

It was an answer that Prosecutor Kelley had sought hard for and got.

The other question, a vital one, remained: the use for which the "sketches" were intended. The Government charged they were efforts at recruiting spies for the Russians. The defense contended they were source material for a novel Miss Coplon says she was writing.

This contention the Government had attacked vigorously earlier in the day.

Canadian Report Quoted

Kelley read in court from a Royal Canadian Commission report which uncovered methods followed by the Russians in spy recruiting through "social contacts." He sought to show that the information given by Miss Coplon in the "character sketches" closely followed this established technique.

The alleged novel itself also was closely looked into by the prosecutor in his cross-examination earlier in the day.

Miss Coplon said it was "the story of a Government girl" and that one of the main characters was "Michael," which name she said she got from reading about the Archangel Michael in the Book of Revelation.

The name "Michael" also appears in another note found in Miss Coplon's purse when she was arrested and which she also claims had to do with her novel. The note begins:

"I have not been able (and don't think I will) to get the top secret FBI report which I described to Michael on Soviet and Communist intelligence activities in the United States. When the moment was favorable I asked Foley where the report was. . . ."

"What was his last name?" Kelley asked yesterday about the character "Michael" in Miss Coplon's novel.

"Smith," she said.

"Did you think of that just now?" Kelley asked softly.

"No," Miss Coplon snapped. "I thought of it when I wrote the character.

"Michael Smith," she said, was a young social sciences professor in her book and she, as a character herself in the novel, discussed with him various things happening in Washington such as "witch hunting, the loyalty program, etc."

"Explain to the jury," Kelley asked, "what you meant by the words, 'When the moment was favorable, I asked Foley (the name of her Justice Department chief) . . .'"

"Just my way of writing," Miss Coplon said.

When he had finished with his cross-examination yesterday, Kelley said to the defense attorney:

"I give you back your witness."

"Thank you very much," Palmer said.

Miss Coplon wore her simplest and yet most striking attire of the trial at yesterday's session in District Court: A full skirt of a shouting blue and above this a white blouse. The blouse was rather thin, inadequate to obscure her figure when she sat forward as she frequently did.

She was a figure of fury and flame as she screamed back at her prosecutor. From her eyes flowed a cool hate. Her cries, despite their intensity, seemed too controlled to justify the word "hysteria." "Passion, bitterness, wrath. . . " would seem the more appropriate words.

One was put in mind of the description applied to her in her Barnard College yearbook:

". . . a great gift of righteous indignation . . . easily moved to deep pathos or wild merriment . . ."

An incessant variety of gestures poured from her hands. An example is the one in which her hands start almost at the floor and move palms upward, to the level of her bosom. Anyone at all familiar with that activity, and watching her, would almost surely know that she has studied modern dance—as she has. At times she seemed almost to be dancing in the witness stand.

Monday she will be there again, as her attorney, Palmer, begins his redirect examination.

S. Dak.); Ferguson (R., Mich.); Morse (R., Oreg.).

Also Senators Young (R., N. Dak.), Thye (R., Minn.), Holland (D., Fla.), Martin (R., Pa.), Butler (R., Nebr.), Cordon (R., Oreg.), Cain (R., Wash.), Taft (R., Ohio), Russell (D., Ga.) and Bricker (R., Ohio).

The Connally-Vandenberg clash was the first public argument between the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and its top-ranking Republican member since they linked arms in the bipartisan approach to many foreign policy issues in 1945.

They have worked closely on such key programs as the Marshall Plan and the Atlantic defense pact. But they split today after Senator Brewster denounced Mr. Truman's appointment of W. Walton Butterworth as Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs.

Connally said he felt sure that when the question of "recognition or nonrecognition" arises the Administration will advise the Foreign Relations Committee of "the exact facts involved and the considerations being given them."

But the 21 Senators said they wanted the Government to "make it clear" that no recognition of the Communists is in order and that the United States will continue to extend "friendship and assistance" to the Nationalist government.

It was learned that Vandenberg was not asked to sign the letter, which was circulated in the Senate by Knowland.

Vandenberg termed the appointment a "very great mistake" because it means a "continuation of a regime which inevitably is connected with a very tragic failure in the Far East." He referred to Butterworth's service as head of the department's Far Eastern Affairs office.

Connally fired back that the United States has given the Chinese Nationalist government two billion dollars in aid, and said the Nationalists never had lost a battle against the Communists because of lack of arms.

"What else would you have us do?" Connally demanded. "Would you send your own sons to fight in the Chinese civil war?"

Brewster then demanded the Administration produce the report on China prepared by Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer. The report has been kept secret for more than two years by President Truman and Secretaries of State George C. Marshall and Dean G. Acheson, because of its "potentially explosive" effect on the international situation.

Vandenberg aid the bipartisan approach had not been employed on Far Eastern questions.

Senator Taft, who only occasionally debates foreign policy issues, criticized the Butterworth appointment and said it might indicate advancement for a man who is responsible for "weakening" the department's stand against Communists in the Far East.

Lie Says Foreign Ministers Have Made Progress

Lake Success, N. Y., June 24 (U.P.)—United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie said today he thought "that the Foreign Ministers have definitely made progress and that the hope for peace has been improved by their work."

Lie took the occasion to observe that Sunday is the fourth anniversary of the signing of the UN Charter at San Francisco.

He added "it can truthfully be said that our troubles would have been much worse if the United Nations had not been established."

Volcano Gas Poisoning Fatal to Film Official

Stromboli, Italy, June 24 (U.P.)—The production director of the movie Ingrid Bergman is making on Stromboli died yesterday of gas poisoning suffered while shooting scenes at the crater of the island's volcano.

Ludovico Muratori, the director, had been ill ever since he was engulfed in a sudden blast of volcanic gas near the edge of the crater a week ago.

U. S. Held Set To Use Airlift Entire Winter

Berlin, June 24 (NYHT).—The American airlift very likely will continue the entire winter, though probably on a more limited basis, high authorities stated today.

Plans to continue the airlift emphasize how very minimum was the East-West accord on Germany reached in Paris. It also points up America's determination not to get caught once again by a Russian squeeze play in Berlin.

The airlift decision was made at a high level in Washington, authorities state.

If the rail tie-up is settled, the airlift operation will be pared down. Four-engine C-54s continue to be Berlin's main source of supply. The planes bring in about 7000 tons a day as compared to truck deliveries of about 3000 tons. The rail strike has cut off rail deliveries completely.

West German Rail Shutdown Threatened

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, June 24 (NYHT).—West German trade union leaders tonight threatened a complete shutdown of rail traffic into the Soviet occupation zone after the Russians rejected an American request to assist in moving westbound Allied trains out of the city.

Some 2000 striking Berlin rail workers were busy all yesterday and today in preparing the way for resumption of traffic between Berlin and the west. Strikers have tied up all rail deliveries into west Berlin for 35 days.

American authorities made the direct request of the Russian-controlled Reichsbahn for movement of the Bremerhaven-bound train after west Berlin trade union leadership had failed during the day in efforts to persuade the Russian rail system to clear at least three Allied trains through the Soviet zone.

The excuse given by the Russians for failing to provide a locomotive and clearance for the American train for Bremerhaven was that they could not send inspection teams into west Berlin because of the presence at rail stations of west sector rail union leaders, including Hans Jahn, the union chairman.

Jahn declared, "I am of the opinion that the western German rail workers will go ahead with a stoppage of rail traffic to the Soviet zone . . . but the final decision will be made Monday."

If the western railway men act, the Russians will be confronted with precisely the counterblockade conditions that prevailed during the height of the Berlin crisis.

Satellites Blocked in U. N.

Lake Success, June 24 (U.P.)—The United States told Russia today that, if she wants five more of her satellites admitted to the United Nations, she had better influence them to mend their ways on keeping the peace and recognizing fundamental human rights and freedom.

Ambassador Warren R. Austin, permanent United States delegate to the U. N., told the Security Council the American delegation could not vote for the admission of Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Outer Mongolia or Romania, whose applications are supported by Russia.

In view of indications that Russia, in turn, would not vote for the admission of Austria, Ceylon, Finland, Ireland, Italy, Jordan and Portugal, all supported by the Western powers, Austin recommended the Security Council drop the matter for the present.

Observers pointed out that the American delegation took this position to avoid being accused of deliberately provoking further vetoes from the Russians, who have cast 30 of the 31 vetoes in U. N. history—13 to block previous attempts to bring the seven Western-supported countries into the U. N.

U. N. Fund Set Up For Mental Health

Rome, June 24 (NYHT).—A $942,000 program for improvement of the world's mental health was adopted today by the program committee of the World Health Organization, United Nations medical agency. Psychiatrists said the program is the first international venture of this kind.

The program was adopted, 25 to 6, after vigorous appeals in behalf of it by Americans and British, and against it by physicians of several Soviet satellite nations.

The $942,000 expenditure on mental health improvement measures in 1950 is larger than the sums to be spent against either venereal disease or tuberculosis.

Atomic "Fascism"

Senator Millikin's charge of "fascistic" operation of atomic energy "company towns" is at least a relief from the Hickenlooper potshots at the Atomic Energy Commission as too sympathetic to Communists.

In point of fact, there may be a modicum of truth in what Senator Millikin alleges. His charge cuts through to the nature of the Atomic Energy Commission. The AEC is, by law, a governmental monopoly with vast power over what in other fields would be private business. It was so constituted because the military implications of atomic fission made the production of atomic materials too dangerous to be entrusted outside governmental control. Inevitably the Atomic Energy Commission has, for security and other considerations, assumed an attitude of paternalism in the new towns surrounding the installations operated by companies under contract, such as General Electric. It is possible that there have been abuses, that the AEC has been too restrictive in its attitude toward the admission of new business enterprises in these towns.

In any event, it is apparent that Atomic Energy Commission operations of this sort deserve close scrutiny, for any enterprise, especially governmental, benefits from constructive criticism. Possibly less regulation is called for, just as less secrecy on matters not justifiably secret would have a healthful effect in promoting more private industry participation in atomic energy applications. But the effect of the picayune harassment engaged in by Senator Hickenlooper is in precisely the opposite direction. Scrutiny of the operations Senator Millikin complains of is the job of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy; but under the Hickenlooper leadership the committee offered little guidance, and indeed, the commission practically had to force information upon it. The implication of Senator Millikin's charges is that the Joint Committee ought to be playing the part of a real watchdog instead of either a poodle or a hound of the chase.

Judges As Witnesses

The simple answer to the question of why Justices Reed and Frankfurter testified as character witnesses in the Alger Hiss case is that they were subpenaed. The subpena is an order compelling one who has knowledge of facts bearing upon a case before the court to appear and tell what he knows in the interests of justice. Judges are not immune to subpenas. When summoned by another court, they must respond as readily as any other citizen, however distasteful it may be to them.

While there seems to be no precedent for the appearance of Supreme Court justices as character witnesses, it is not an uncommon practice for other judges to be thus summoned. Several judges testified as character witnesses in the Robert I. Miller case in 1944 in the Federal District Court here. In the famous Glover, Flather and Flather perjury case in 1916 two former Presidents, Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft, testified as character witnesses and contributed to the acquittal of the defendants. The fact remains, however, that many judges are extremely reluctant to take the witness stand, and there is good reason for their concern about the practice.

Any duty that takes a judge off the bench and injects him into controversial issues before the public in a nonjudicial role tends to undermine the prestige of the courts. A similar issue arises when judges are borrowed from the bench to conduct investigations, to sit on commissions or render other unjudicial service. Unquestionably they are useful in such assignments and their presence lends confidence to quasi-judicial undertakings. But the net effect of their stepping down from the bench is to minimize confidence in the impartiality of the judicial system itself. In a lesser degree we suspect that this is also likely to be true when judges take the witness chair either for or against individuals on trial.

There was a special reason, of course, for Justice Frankfurter's testimony. As a Harvard Law School professor, he had recommended Mr. Hiss as a law clerk to the late Justice Holmes. In cases in which a justice has special knowledge of the individual on trial the obvious advantage of having his testimony may outweigh the disadvantage of having the judge become a witness. It may be assumed that Justices Frankfurter and Reed would in any event have disqualified themselves from passing on the Hiss case if it should reach the Supreme Bench. Nevertheless, the practice of calling upon judges to testify before other courts is certainly not one to be encouraged.

Job For The President

A double-page advertisement in this newspaper Friday set forth in poignant detail the desperate plight of the 540,000 residents of Hawaii. For nearly two months Hawaii has undergone a virtually total blockade decreed by Harry Bridges' International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. Ostensibly the strike is one of 2000 stevedores against the stevedoring companies; but in reality it is a war against the Hawaiian islands. And the war is going against Hawaii. Food stocks are scraping bottom, unemployment is mounting, cattle are dying, exports are rotting. President Truman meanwhile has done nothing to invoke the injunctive procedure of the Taft-Hartley Act; and the Governor of Hawaii will have no power to enforce the recommendations of a fact-finding board he has appointed unless the union and employers choose to accept them.

Beyond the immediate injury to the Hawaiian economy, the strike unquestionably has done great damage to Hawaii's plea for statehood. It shows how the islands can be held in thrall by a single union. An indication of the harm that has been done to the cause of statehood is the somewhat hypersensitive report just issued by Senator Butler recommending against statehood "until communism in the Territory may be brought under effective control."

What Senator Butler is talking about is not communism among the residents in general, but communism in the leadership of the ILWU. The Federal Government now is seeking to prove that Harry Bridges has concealed his Communist affiliation. Certainly there are other issues than communism in the present strike, but the Communist overtones cannot be overlooked, and it is a matter of record that this is the third prolonged strike tying up shipping since 1946. The ambitions of Mr. Bridges come through his dark hint that a strike against the sugar plantations will come next.

Of primary importance is the realization that the Bridges leadership and communism in the ILWU are a national rather than local problem. Lately the CIO has been energetic in its anti-Communist campaign, and it would gladly be rid of Mr. Bridges if it could accomplish this without making him a martyr. But the fact cannot be ignored that Bridges was elected by members of his union, most of whom presumably are not Communists. Thus the problem of restoring sane leadership to the ILWU is an extraordinarily difficult one that cannot be solved by fiat.

But the immediate issue—relief for Hawaii—is one where legal measures are called for, and where they should be applied for. The least the President should do, it seems to us, is to ask for an injunction under the Taft-Hartley law applying to companies as well as the union and on the West Coast as well as Hawaii. Then if union members defied the ruling the Army and Navy could be pressed into emergency service to rescue the innocent victims of the blockade while the courts dealt with Mr. Bridges.

Argentine Pact

Administrator Hoffman told the Senate Appropriations Committee that the ECA "would bring every pressure we can" to bear on Great Britain to prevent that country from signing the trade pact just concluded with Argentina. Although Mr. Hoffman pointed out that the aid program could be canceled, as a last resort, to back up State Department protests against the terms of the agreement, there is no reason to believe that such extreme measures will be taken. In fact, it is most unfortunate that Mr. Hoffman was prodded by senatorial questioning into voicing such a threat.

The agreement is, as he says, a departure from the kind of multilateral trading that the ERP aims to re-create. But nobody knows better than Mr. Hoffman that a return to multilateral trading is not immediately possible. The best that can be hoped for is a gradual abandonment of bilateral trade agreements providing for an exchange of goods on a quid pro quo basis. The major objection to the present pact is that it commits the British to a five-year arrangement to buy specified amounts of meat from Argentina. In return the Argentineans will obtain from Britain oil, machinery, and other products. While the British claim that the amounts of such purchases are not fixed and will vary in amount from year to year, American firms maintain that the effect will be to close the Argentine market to competing American products and enable the British to establish a monopoly of that market at their expense.

There is force in the argument that the British have to get supplies from countries willing to take pay in goods since they do not have the dollars with which to finance purchases. But it does not follow that they are justified in tying up trade for a long period of years and meantime using American money to increase their own exports to Argentina under a restrictive agreement to the detriment of American trade. It is the time element, not the nature of the agreement, that is at fault, and any compromise arrangement should call for a much earlier termination of the pact.

Jobs For Graduates

The Department of Labor points out that this year's crop of college graduates probably exceeds last year's record total of 319,000, and that these graduates are entering the labor market at a time when industry is hiring fewer workers. Some 800,000 more people are currently unemployed than a year ago and if unemployment follows the usual seasonal pattern, the department says, the number of unemployed will rise during the summer months with the influx of students and teachers in search of vacation jobs. The inescapable conclusion is that graduates will not be able to pick and choose their jobs as freely as in former years, and some may not find any suitable employment for a long time to come.

The bureau offers encouragement to these young jobseekers by suggesting that those who have trained for occupations in fields where there is an oversupply of new graduates turn their attention to related fields and that undergraduates consider changes in training that will offer them better employment opportunities. This is sound advice. Graduates who are unable to find openings in their chosen field would also do well to study the handbook issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in cooperation with the Veterans' Administration surveying the employment outlook in a long list of occupations ranging from professional and white-collar jobs to farming and industry.

Key Executives

President Truman on Thursday "willingly" signed a bill giving members of the House of Representatives an additional $3000 for clerk hire and $500 for telephone and telegraph charges. Quite properly and quite deftly he took the occasion to repeat his request for congressional action on legislation to increase the pay of some 230 top positions in the executive branch.

This legislation has been under consideration ever since the beginning of the session. It was originally part of the same measure covering salaries of the President, Vice President and Speaker of the House, but got left behind when Congress acted only on these three items. Since then it has been held up largely by congressional desire to take care of the classified civil service employes.

This makes good political sense, of course, but not such good "business" sense. We have several times pointed out that there is an economy aspect of the executive salary increase. Herbert Hoover has, too; and so has the President. Good executives are always in demand and can get good pay outside of the Government because part of their worth is that they know how to operate efficiently.

The business of government needs efficiency at least as much as any other kind of business. In the vital matter of maintaining the prestige of democratic forms, it needs efficient executives far more than any other activity in the United States. The Government is present in almost every aspect of human endeavor these days, and its functions are being steadily expanded by congressional action.

The positions covered in the executive pay bill are key positions in the Administration. As the President said, "the success or failure of all the things the United States Government undertakes to do depends in large measure upon the wisdom and ability of these executives." Insofar as monetary compensation can attract and hold competent men and women in the public employ, the failure to provide them adequate salaries is a poor and shortsighted service to good—and therefore economical—government. Without action this session the Government, to our knowledge, will lose half a dozen executives of outstanding competence—a loss that will be an embarrassment in their departments and a decided injury to the American people.

Attack On Barden

Our editorial to which Monsignor Spence replies in an adjacent column quoted from the same sentence in Cardinal Spellman's remarks given by Monsignor Spence. We fail to see why it is misrepresentation when we do it and not when the monsignor does it. We insist, indeed, that, as we said in the editorial, the onus for misrepresentation lics on the cardinal. And the proof of this is in the language of the Barden bill.

Section 4 specifies that "Except for the express condition imposed by Section 5, the expenditure of such funds (after they have been turned over to a State) shall be subject to the laws of such State rather than to the laws of the United States."

The express condition imposed by Section 5 is this: "Amounts paid to any State under this act shall be expended only for current expenditures for public elementary and secondary schools within such State."

Section 7 defines "current expenditures" to exclude "expenditures for transportation or . . . health services."

In other words, Federal funds granted under the bill may not be used for health or transportation services for either public or nonpublic school pupils. Nothing in the language of the bill or in its effect prohibits a State from using its own funds for such services to nonpublic school students. On the contrary, the bill is carefully written to prevent any Federal interference with the way a State uses its own funds.

As Monsignor Spence says, the Thomas bill does not "guarantee" that the States must give health and transportation services to all children. For the Federal Government to impose such a condition on its grants would be fatal to the principle of local control of education.

What it comes down to is this: that The Washington Post believes in equal health services for all children, as Monsignor Spence will find by reading our editorials of April 29 and May 8 on the school health bill; that it believes in accuracy in pulpit as well as in press; and that it believes in the basic American doctrine of separation of church and state.

Policy For Asia

Your June 19 editorial calling for a study "of the possibility of a Marshall Plan for Asia restricted to trade encouragement together with the application of Point IV" is indeed timely.

We have never had a positive policy in Asia. The Hay doctrine and the Nine Power Treaty were, at best, but negative approaches. They emphasized what should not be done, not what should be done. General MacArthur, in Japan, has carried out what most nearly approaches a positive policy in Japan. But he has done so, in spite of, rather than because of, any positive postulates in regard to Asia laid down by the Administration.

There is little wonder, therefore, that there is apathy in Congress over the proposed aid to Korea; little wonder at the complete frustration in the face of Communist successes in China; little wonder at our confusion about Indonesia, Burma, Indo-China and Siam.

Communism thrives on poverty and as long as the East continues to verge on starvation, the Communist threat in Asia will grow. A Far Eastern policy must, therefore, be aimed to improve Asia's standard of living and this can best be accomplished through greater trade.

A commercial policy for Asia might well envisage, then, a reshaping of trade channels disrupted by the war. Just as Germany is the key to European recovery, Japan is the key to Asiatic recovery. Under the democratic aegis of the United States, Japan—post-Tojo Japan—can become the keystone of the arch which the builders rejected.

Rejecting the Cairo declaration and holding firmly to the Potsdam agreement, we can utilize Japan's need for economic self-containment to implement a positive economic and commercial policy in Asia, that will at last make us worthy of the world leadership which we cannot avoid. REALIST.

Arab Refugees

"Concerned" in his letter of June 15 betrays a noticeable lack of concern for accuracy and truth.

The Arab refugee question is one that calls for considerable clear thinking. These Arabs who remained in Israel have kept their homes, their property, their businesses. They have been given the right to vote during a bitter life and death struggle and their representatives have been elected to office including membership in Parliament.

The United Nations has been quick to approve of aid for the Arab refugees who left their homes voluntarily or because of the persuasion of Arab militarists. The speed and attention contrast sharply with neglect of other refugee bodies, with delay and evasion in carrying out the decision of the U. N. to erect an independent state of Israel, with lack of interest and failure to protest the barbarous actions of the British.

The new state seems to be most impractical when it comes to mercy and justice. It is opening its doors to Jews from all over the world despite inadequate housing, lack of revenue, lack of employment and the need for a reduced standard of living for the population. Inflation, austerity, rationing, economic crises do not seem to be practical answers when they might be avoided by slowing the amazing rate of immigration.

What does Israel say about the Arab refugees? First of all, many of them are not refugees from Palestine. Secondly, what are their fellow Arab governments doing to help their lot? Arab states which are quick to claim sovereignty over Palestine do not seem eager to have responsibilities for their would-be new populations. Despite the physical shortage of space, the absence of facilities, the danger of fifth column activities, the need to concentrate resources on building up the economy of Israel, the government is willing to cooperate in solving the problem as part of the broader issue whose solution may mean peace and prosperity for the Middle East. The Arab states refuse to discuss peace unless their demands on the refugee issue are met wholly by Israel.

Communist Trial

The trial of the leaders of the Communist Party in New York is certainly contrary to anything that is democratic and fair. A man is jailed for refusing to be a stoolpigeon and two others are jailed for speaking up to defend him. Another is jailed because he wants to defend himself.

This is the first time there has ever been a political trial in the United States. The defendants have not been accused of any overt acts and should be released in the interests of justice and democracy. A. Y.

Childs' Courage

I wish to compliment your newspaper for having such good judgment as to select and retain as one of your columnists Mr. Marquis Childs.

Mr. Childs' column represents a consistently high order of observing, thinking and writing. He is a happy combination of a reporter with a good nose for news and a commentator with the insight and courage to write in a popular style about unpopular truths. He avoids bitterness, rancor and prejudice and seeks for objectivity, fairness and facts.

The recent columns which Mr. Childs has written on the subject of loyalty investigations and civil liberties are outstanding. They mark him as a man who understands deeply and cares greatly about the basic civil liberties without which this democracy would completely suffocate and die.

The temper of the times is such that his statements are not popular. It takes more than ordinary courage for a columnist to express them. No other columnist, so far as I know, has had the combination of perception and courage to fiight the civil liberties fight as Mr. Childs has done. Not even the leading university presidents, to whom academic freedom should be sacred, have spoken out with fearlessness as Mr. Childs has done.

Few of us behave as though we understod and believed the statement of Benjamin Franklin that, "Those who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety." Mr. Childs does.

"Attack On Barden"

One thing is quite evident from your June 22 editorial on the Barden bill: by completely misrepresenting Cardinal Spellman's remarks and the Catholic position on Federal aid to education, you violate "the canons of accuracy" from which you accuse the cardinal of departing.

In his address the cardinal said: "The Barden bill would direct that under no circumstances would nonpublic school pupils receive the health benefits and transportation services provided for their companions attending public schools."

The proof of this is in Sections 4, 5 and 7 of the Barden bill which in effect would prohibit both State and Federal expenditures to give health and transportation services to nonpublic school pupils. However, it would not prohibit the States from using their own funds for health and transportation services to public school pupils exclusively.

It is true that the Barden measure excludes health and transportation services from the definition of "current expenditures" for which Federal funds may be used by the States. The reason for this exclusion is obvious: these are the two services which some States might give to nonpublic school pupils under the heading of "current expenditures" for public education.

The Washington Post says that the cardinal and other Catholics "favor the Thomas aid to education bill passed by the Senate." This is totally incorrect. Catholic spokesmen, including representatives of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, have repeatedly expressed their opposition to the Thomas bill for two reasons: its failure to confine Federal aid to needy States and its failure to guarantee essential health and welfare services for all children in these States.

What The Post editorial does not say is that it would prefer to have no Federal aid at all than to give 1 cent of Federal money in aid of nonpublic school children. This is the only explanation of The Post's refusal to indorse a number of compromise proposals which would give most of the money to public schools and mere token recognition to nonpublic school pupils.

What it comes down to is this: The Post favors the use of Federal dollars for health and welfare of public school children exclusively, while Catholics favor the use of this money for the health and welfare of all children.

VERY REV. MSGR. JOHN H. SPENCE,
Director of Education, Archdiocese of Washington.

c+s

It requires colossal nerve to make the statements the cardinal made about the Barden bill for Federal aid to education, such as: "This discrimination is not only unjust to Catholic children, it is a menace to American democracy itself," when it is so obvious that if the cardinal and all Catholic leaders believed in democracy and freedom of religion they would permit Catholics to send their children to the public schools where they might learn what democracy really means.

Catholic leaders not only want their religion to dominate, but history proves over and over again that they also want their church to dominate the state, and that is where the real menace to American democracy is and always has been.

National Good Sense

By Malvina Lindsay

John Doe's Progress

KANSAS CITY, MO.—A traveler about the country these days doesn't have to be a Gallup Poll man or even an expert interviewer of filling station attendants to reach the classic conclusion that "people aren't so dumb after all."

Talking with people on trains, in restaurants, offices, homes, you get a renewed faith in American common sense, intelligence and capacity for growth. One striking example of how Americans react when their basic liberties are threatened has been the widespread indignation over the textbook inquiry of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

True, leading educators led off with strong denunciations of this action. But the average citizen doesn't always follow the lead of the "profs." In fact the professor has never been a popular figure among a people traditionally opposed to authority.

In this case, however, persons of varying backgrounds whom this writer encountered generally backed the "profs." Many were deeply aroused. Some who had been sympathetic toward the committee felt that it had finally gotten "too nosey."

c+s

A FEELING seems to be growing among many people that despite the menace Soviet tactics present, something must be done to prevent loyalty investigations and spy hunts from running wild. One gets the impression the American sense of personal liberty is putting up its ramparts.

Yet anticommunism is strong and deeply rooted. It seems calmer, however. There is less talk of the "next war" in immediate terms, though many believe it will come eventually. There seems to be growing resignation to cold-war tension continuing indefinitely; growing realization that the struggle between the American and Soviet way of life will shape the pattern of living for years to come. One hears less chatter about "keeping the atom bomb secret," though widespread childish faith in the infallible protection of the bomb "secret" still persists.

The postwar work of the colleges, high schools, newspapers, radio forums and local town halls in getting the international facts of life to citizens is beginning to show up. Fourteen State Legislatures this spring passed resolutions urging more power for the United Nations. Six other State Legislatures, including that of this State, had previously done so. Kansas, once the heart of isolationist territory, has taken the lead among States in organizing a State council, with supplementary local councils, to further the work of UNESCO in international understanding.

IN MISSOURI—at whose university it has long been traditional for the students to rise in a surge of enthusiasm when the band plays Dixie—there is evident much growth of recognition for the Negro. In a small rock-ribbed city this writer visited, a gifted Negro music teacher, who recently moved there from the East, had a large clientele of both white and Negro pupils. This could not have happened a few years ago. At the State university the student body this year, by a vote of 4847 to 1847, favored admitting Negroes to courses in which equivalent instruction was not offered at Lincoln University.

One naturally finds the old lines of opinion drawn on many issues. On every hand is the solid American who is uneasy over growing powers of Government, disturbed by European socialism, fearful that the American private enterprise system is slipping. On the other hand are those who fear that slum dwellings, low standards of living and unemployment, growing out of too much laissez-faire economics, will be the Trojan horse of communism in this country. But generally both sides speak with the thoughtful rather than the apoplectic approach.

Some leaders are disturbed because people's concern with their personal affairs is so great. Luncheon and dinner clubs, it is reported, now want entertainment rather than serious discussion. Yet forums and debates on public affairs pull well. Radio commentators, it is charged, have stolen the thunder of the visiting lecturer.

Whether or not people listen to lectures, they seem to know what is going on and to have their own ideas about it. One gets from them a strong feeling of expanding mental horizons. One feels the country will be safe in their hands—if it does not lag in its educational progress.

Viet Nam Support

Stewart Alsop's recommendation that the United States support the Vietnamese movement in Indo-China is the typical and logical conclusion of any impartial observer. And how relieving it is to find the name of the Viet Nam leader, Ho Chi-Minh, without the typical French-propaganda adjective, viz. "Communist."

The sooner that the nations of the democratic world realize that a strong nationalist movement is the best antidote to communism, the quicker the Red menace will be destroyed.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Hiss On Trial

NEW YORK.—Against the dark paneling of the courtroom the slight figure in a light summer suit has an almost boyish look. For Alger Hiss and for all of us, participants and spectators alike, in the solemn quiet of the room, this is the climax.

Childs

It began nearly a year ago in quite a different atmosphere. With the sensational headlines growing out of the investigation of the House Un-American Activities Committee the life of respectable, even distinguished, public service that Hiss had led came abruptly to an end.

He was accused of treason. His face and his name appeared on the front pages of newspapers everywhere. All the details of his past were spread out for public view. He resigned from the responsible office he held.

If this ordeal has wrought any change in him, it is not outwardly apparent. There is the same quiet, confident manner that has marked him from the beginning.

If he is afraid, if he has doubts, if he has been seared by his grueling experience, he does not show it in any way. Occasionally a slight smile relieves the serious expression of his thin face. And that is true especially when his chief counsel, Lloyd Paul Stryker, asks him to identify his wife, who has been sitting at his side from the first day of the trial up until he took the witness stand.

As he describes his career, he speaks in a voice so low that Stryker has to ask him to speak up so the jury can hear him. You get some idea as the narrative goes on of how much hard work went into that career.

o+o

IT HAS been so from the first years. This is one kind of an American success story—the leader in his church, in his high school class, a Phi Beta Kappa, one of the editors of the Law Review in his class at Harvard, a happy marriage, a devoted husband, responsible public office, trust and confidence.

There was never a wrong step, never a doubtful turning. That is what is so supremely baffling about this case—this American Dreyfus case—that this man should be the accused.

Why? How has it come about? Regardless of the outcome of the present contest, that is what any but the most prejudiced person must ask. If Whittaker Chambers is lying, then what is the motive? What malignity could motivate the destruction of another human being?

As far as the layman's superficial judgment goes, Hiss is getting as fair a trial as is possible in the jittery, oversuspicious atmosphere of the present day. It is being conducted in a calm, orderly fashion without sensationalism and with press and public kept to the strictest decorum.

The jury has a solid, upper middle-class look. The women wear hats that look as though they were expensive. You feel they will do their duty in a solid, substantial way and certainly you would not suspect in them any latent sympathies for the New Deal which might sway them in Hiss' favor.

o+o

BUT WHEN all this has been said, something almost equally important must be added. If the battery of lawyers at the defense counsel table are charging their usual fees, then the defense of this case must cost at least $50,000.

A reasonable fee for Stryker, perhaps the ablest trial lawyer in New York, would be a thousand dollars a day. Edward C. McLean and a number of the younger lawyers in his firm spent days and days in the preparation of the case. This included a great deal of detective work leading up to the recovery of that battered old Woodstock typewriter.

The court costs, the cost of the record, the taking of depositions, all this adds to the bill. Dr. Carl Binger, the psychiatrist retained by the defense to observe Whittaker Chambers as he testified, would have a standard fee of $40 or $50 an hour.

The defendant must pay this bill. It happens, of course, that a number of his loyal friends who believe passionately in his innocence are helping to pay it. Yet nevertheless, the staggering cost of the defense is part of the ordeal. And it should be perfectly obvious that without such a defense to match, or match in part, the infinite resources of the Government and the FBI, it would not be a fair trial.

There is no slightest sign of this in the serene face of the defendant. There is no trace of it in the firm voice in which he replies with a denial to questions about the charges brought against him. It might be someone else who was on trial, some other person whose entire future turns on the decision of the 12 men and women in the jury box.

Conservatives Seek Tighter Empire Ties

London, June 24 (AP).—Winston Churchill's Conservative Party proposed tonight stronger Empire defense and trade ties to keep Britain from declining.

"We believe that if the British Empire were to break up Britain would become a third-class power, unable to feed or defend herself," the party said in its outline of imperial policy.

The statement is the first of several the party will issue before its annual conference in London in October. Then it will prepare for the general elections before next summer.

To unify military defenses, the Conservatives propose setting up a commonwealth defense council and a commonwealth combined staff.

To foster colonial and commonwealth trade, the party suggests forming a group for empire economic consultations.

The party came out strongly for building up trade among the commonwealth nations, the colonies and the home country.

British Gold Drained Below 'Safety Limit'

London, June 24 (U.P.).—Financial experts said today Britain's gold reserves have fallen below the "safety limit," and warned that present economic trends may force the nation further to reduce purchases in the United States.

The experts said Britain's backlog of gold is considerably smaller now than when Marshall Plan aid began, and that a further increase in the drain on the country's economic resources was likely.

Authoritative sources sharply denied Wall Street reports that the British pound "is going to be devalued today." One source said, "it's just the same old campaign."

Official figures show that Britain's gold reserve on April 1, 1948, was 552 million pounds ($2,224,560,000). By April 1 this year it had fallen to 471,000,000 pounds ($1,898,130), and it is believed to have decreased still further.

Official British sources said the steady drop in gold resources made it very unlikely that Britain would agree to any convertibility system which would drain her scant supply to dollars.

PUC Authorizes Rush Service on K-6 Bus Line

District Public Utilities Commission yesterday authorized operation of short route rush period service on the K-6 line to provide additional service within the District starting Monday.

The service was approved pending extension of the K-4 route to Eastern ave. nw. which is now before the Maryland Public Service Commission since it involves route changes in adjoining Maryland area.

The short route will run north on the regular route to the intersection of New Hampshire ave. and Quackenbos st., east on Quackenbos to Eastern ave., northwest on Eastern to New Hampshire ave. and then south on New Hampshire over the regular route.

Supreme Court

9 Justices Ignoring Loyalty Vow

By Robert S. Allen

The nine justices of the United States Supreme Court are ignoring a specific congressional requirement for loyalty oaths.

The jurists have taken no formal action on the matter. They merely have gone their own quiet way and disregarded Congress.

Further, they have included in this aloof policy their own personal secretaries and legal assistants.

All other clerical, administrative and maintenance employes of the tribunal have signed loyalty pledges. But the jurists and their immediate personal staffs have not.

Law Is Quoted

In disregarding the law, the nine justices are in no danger of punitive action. Neither Congress, nor anyone else, is going to do anything about it. For two reasons:

First, the justices have a historic precedent to support their stand. Second, Congress has no way to enforce its demand, even if it wanted to.

The congressional provision that applies to the tribunal is Section 501 of the Justice, Commerce and Judiciary Appropriation Act of June 30, 1948.

This section reads, "No part of any appropriation contained therein shall be used to pay the salary or wages of anyone who engages in a strike against the United States, who belongs to an organization that asserts the right to strike against the United States, or who is a member of an organization that advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the United States Government . . . Execution of an affidavit shall be prima facie evidence of compliance."

The section specifies a fine of $1000 and a year's imprisonment for violation.

Law Declared Invalid

It is under this act that the nine justices and all employes of the Supreme Court draw their pay.

During the Reconstruction period, Congress passed a loyalty oath law. The intent of this law was to bar Confederates from Federal employment. Everyone on the Government payroll had to take an oath he had not borne arms against the Union.

This law was challenged and the Supreme Court ruled it invalid.

Prelate's Arrest Feared By Vatican

they acted under measures prescribed by the central government on Tuesday.

The nature of the police measures was not disclosed.

One large Prague church was filled to overflowing tonight following a report that Beran would appear there. When he failed to appear, the parish priest said privately the archbishop had canceled his plans "because of the prevailing conditions."

Archbishop Beran was believed still secluded in his Prague palace under heavy police guard.

Czechoslovakia's Protestant minority is reported preparing to support a traditional antagonist—the Roman Catholic Church— in the latter's fight for survival.

A western clergyman visiting in Prague, who asked to remain anonymous, quoted Protestants in favor of the move as saying "we are next and we are lost if the Catholics succumb to state subjugation."

There are nine million Catholics in Czechoslovakia and one million Protestants.

The Protestants—mostly Calvinists (Presbyterians) — also have been under Communist pressure to submit to state control.

Romania Says Bishops Held, Not Tortured

Bucharest, Romania, June 24 (AP).—Six Uniate Church bishops are restricted to their quarters in monasteries, but a Romanian spokesman today denied any have been tortured.

(A Vatican source said yesterday two bishops of the outlawed Uniate Church in Romania had been tortured by Communists who sought to break the clergymen's allegience to Pope Pius XII. The Uniate Church is a Romanian branch of the Roman Catholic faith.)

High Catholic authorities in Bucharest denied also that any of the bishops had been put to torture.

It was said in Bucharest that, legally, the Uniate Church has not been outlawed. Churches and church properties belonging to the Uniate faith, however, were transferred to the pro-Russian Orthodox Church last fall by government decree.

As a result, an estimated 1,500,000 Uniates have no church of their own in Communist Romania.

right leg crossed over his left knee, then, as the weight of the questions shifted, he would sit rigidly upright to look directly at his attorney and vigorously emphasize his answers.

When Stryker asked if he had not fully cooperated with the FBI before his indictment by answering all questions and declining to rely on his constitutional rights of refusing to answer, Hiss leaned forward, propped his elbows on his knees and said deliberately:

"I was interested in finding out the real facts as much as they, the FBI, possibly could be . . . It was a matter beyond the scope of private counsel."

During the four weeks he has sat in this courtroom, Hiss' own legal training obviously provided an opportunity to evaluate the prosecution evidence against him, as it was recounted.

His testimony will be tested when Prosecutor Thomas F. Murphy takes over on cross-examination, probably Monday, when Hiss' direct examination is completed.

Court adjourned today at 1 p. m., as is customary on Friday. As the session came to a close, Stryker had just introduced three typewritten papers.

One was an original of a letter sent from the Hiss home, plus a carbon copy of that letter.

The third paper was a carbon copy of a Hiss letter which was among documents used by an FBI expert in testifying here.

Comparing letters from the Hiss family with 64 typewritten copies of State Department documents in Chambers' possession dated in 1938, the FBI agent said they were made on the same typewriter.

Defense May Call Own Experts

Today's session ended before Stryker could explain the purpose of the defense exhibits. The defense contends that the Hisses disposed of this typewriter before 1938, and that neither Hiss nor his wife, Priscilla, could have made the 64 copies. To support this, it is believed the defense may call its own typewriter experts to testify.

"Did you personally type a single word of the exhibits 5 to 47 (the typewritten pages) here in evidence?" Stryker asked earlier.

A. "I did not."

Q. "Did you ever ask your wife to do so?"

A. "Certainly not."

Q. "Did she ever do so in your presence or to your knowledge?"

A. "No, sir, of course not."

Stryker then asked Hiss what he had told the grand jury about the typewriter. Hiss said he told them, ". . . my impression was that we had it as late as when we lived at Volta pl., and that I was quite sure that we had it when he lived at P st. and 30th st. . . ."

Impression Changed

(The Hisses moved from 2905 P st. nw., in Georgetown, to 1245 30th st. nw., in the summer of 1936. They moved from 30th st. to 3415 Volta pl. in December, 1937, and remained there until 1943.)

"Since that time has your impression changed?" asked Stryker, and Hiss said it had.

Q. "What changed it"

A. "The information discovered by my counsel with respect to the Catletts."

Two brothers, Raymond and Perry Catlett, formerly employed by the Hisses for odd jobs, said they received the typewriter from the Hisses. It is an old Woodstock model which the Hisses obtained in 1933 from Mrs. Hiss' father.

Perry Catlett said he and his brother received the typewriter at the time the Hisses moved from 30th st. to Volta pl.

In addition to the typewritten documents, the evidence includes four handwritten documents and microfilmed copies of State Department documents Chambers says he received from Hiss.

Hiss, who admits the memoranda are in his handwriting, said that while he was assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre in 1938, "it was one of my duties to eliminate as far as possible the volume of written material that reached Mr. Sayre's desk."

Often Made Summaries

For this purpose, he said, he frequently made memoranda summaries, cablegrams, and so on, which he left for Sayre or read to him at lunch.

Commenting on the initials "A. H." which appear on some of the microfilmed documents, Hiss said there was no doubt they are his initial. These initials were put on a document by officers in the department, he said "to indicate to the clerks and everyone else that you are through with it."

Hiss was asked if "original documents were left frequently on Mr. Sayre's desk?"

"Oh, certainly," he replied.

"Also on yours?"

"Certainly."

Developing the defense contention that the old State Department in those days had few security safeguards, and that documents were available to many people, Stryker brought out that in 1938 no passes were required to enter the building.

Once, Hiss said, he found a stranger in his office, "a rather elderly gentleman standing in my office near the fire place."

Sentimental Interest

Hiss said he questioned him, and he said he was there for a "sentimental interest" because "his father worked in the same room many years before."

"Did Mr. Wadleigh come into your office and Mr. Sayre's office?" asked Stryker.

"Oh, yes," Hiss replied. "I recall Mr. Wadleigh coming into my office many times. He also went into Mr. Sayre's office. . . ."

Henry Julian Wadleigh, former State Department economist, has previously testified that during 1936, 1937 and for possibly a short time in 1938, he was a "source" of secret documents for Chambers, taking papers for the spy-ring. He vigorously denied taking any papers from anyone else's desk, and said he had no recollection of the papers in Chambers' possession.

In completing the summary of his career, which he began to recount yesterday, Hiss said that in 1946 he was principal adviser to the United States delegation to the first meeting of the United States delegation to the first meeting of the United Nations General Assembly, where he had charge "of the staff of advisers and technicians."

The following year, he said, he was named president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, succeding Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.

Tells of Resignation

Because of Chambers' charges against him, he said, in December, 1947, he submitted his resignation to the foundation "to avoid any embarrassment to them," but it was not accepted and he continued, as president on leave, until May 5, 1948. He is still a trustee of the group.

"You continued (until May 5) to receive your full salary, which I think was $25,000 a year," asked Stryker.

"Twenty," said Hiss with a smile.

"I'm sorry I'm wrong" countered his attorney, amid laughter.

Hiss declared he did not hear of Chambers' charges against him until the afternoon of August 3, 1948, when he was notified by reporters, after Chambers testified before the House committee.

He described how he immediately wired the committee, requesting permission to answer the accusations.

Hiss described today, as he has many times before, that Chambers came to him when Hiss was working with the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee. "He represented himself as a freelance writer . . . He said his name was George Crosley."

Crosley, or Chambers as he now knows him, said Hiss, came into his office occasionally to talk about magazine articles he said he was writing, and on at least two occasions they had lunch together.

Tells of Moving

Once, when he was driving to New York, said Hiss, Chambers asked to go along and he took him. Hiss denied that he ever went to New York with Chambers on a train.

When the Hisses moved from 28th st. to P st., Chambers said his family was in need of housing and Hiss agreed to let Chambers, his wife and their baby girl stay in the 28th st. apartment for several weeks until the lease ran out.

Because the Chambers' furniture did not arrive in time, "I . . . said we would be glad to put up he and his wife and their child overnight" at the P st. house in April. They stayed "that night and at least one more night," but he said they never were in any other Hiss home overnight.

While Chambers subleased the apartment, said Hiss, he let Chambers have his old 1929 Ford roadster "valued at about $25" because I had decided to acquire a new car" and "he wanted to have a car so that he could take his wife and child to places in nearby Washington."

The subject of the roadster, a feature of extensive testimony before the House committee, was touched on only lightly today.

Says He Was Never Repaid

Hiss said he was never repaid for the apartment rent, though he mentioned it to Chambers several times, and that on a number of occasions Chambers borrowed about $5 or $10 from him which he did not return.

Their final break came, said Hiss, "in late May or early June, 1936, when Chambers sought another loan.

"I told Mr. Chambers that I had become convinced that he would not repay the sums he owed me," Hiss said today, "that I intended to forget all about the sums he owed me and that any further contacts between us had best be discontinued."

When he appeared before the House committee August 5 and was asked if he knew Chambers, Hiss said, he was given only one picture of Chambers to look at and said he could not identify him but would like to see him face to face.

Confrontation Recalled

Later, when he heard Chambers had described furniture in his house, said Hiss, he inspected other newspaper pictures of Chambers and after reflection, "the name of George Crosley came to me as someone who had been in my P st. house."

On August 17, 1948, at a hurriedly called meeting of a special subcommittee of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, at the Hotel Commodore here, Hiss faced Chambers.

He asked him to open his mouth, because he said George Crosley had had very bad teeth, and Hiss asked him to talk. Chambers had had extensive dental work and added considerable weight in recent years. Hiss said he believed Chambers was the man he knew as George Crosley.

Hiss, in answer to Stryker's questions, vehemently denied, as he did yesterday, that he ever gave any unauthorized documents to Chambers.

Stryker recounted Chambers' charges that "in 1936 or 1937 you went with him to some remote point in Brooklyn to a moving-picture theater house where you met a man by the name of Bykov . . ." Bykov, Chambers said, was Col. Boris Bykov, a Russian espionage agent, and Chambers said Hiss willingly agreed to obtain State Department documents for him.

No Truth in It, He Says

"Is there a word of truth in that?" Stryker demanded.

"There is not a word of truth in that," said Hiss firmly.

Hiss denied, in rapid order, that Mr. and Mrs. Chambers ever attended a New Year's party at his home on January 1, 1937; that he and Mrs. Hiss ever attended a wedding party or similar function at the Chambers' home; that he and Mrs. Hiss ever accompanied Chambers to Peterborough, N. H.; that Chambers and his wife ever stayed at the Hisses' 30th st. home.

He similarly denied that he ever helped move the Chambers' furnishings to Baltimore or New York, that he or his wife were ever at Smithtown, Pa., with the Chambers or that he loaned Chambers $400 in 1937 to buy a car.

Explains Bank Withdrawal

A $400 withdrawal from the Hisses' account in the Riggs National Bank, which the prosecution charges was taken out in November 19, to loan to Chambers, was actually used to buy household furnishings for the Hisses, he said.

At that time, Hiss said, they were buying the Volta pl. home, and Mrs. Hiss used the money to buy items in "small specialty shops" where she did not have charge accounts.

These articles included, said Hiss, ". . . glassware, several sets of different types, cocktail types, highball glasses . . . some paintings, additional prints . . . a couple of extra chairs."

"Mr. Chambers testified," said Stryker, "that Hitchcock chairs were purchased for the move to Volta pl. . . . Did you have Hitchcock chairs?"

"We had them ever since we were married," said Hiss, with a smile at Mrs. Hiss, who kept her face turned to her husband throughout his testimony.

"Mr. Chambers had testified describing some mirror which you had on P st.," said Stryker. ". . . was one of those mirrors a mirror that had a particularly sentimental, intrinsic value for you . . .?"

Hiss said he received the mirror as a bequest from the late Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes whom he once served as law clerk. He said it was a "Queen Anne mirror which did and does mean a lot to me."

"I did not have it at the P st. house at the time Mr. and Mrs. Chambers and their child stayed there . . . it has hanged in every house I have had since . . ."

Hiss' testimony was interrupted so that the defense could bring to the stand Judge Charles E. Wyzanski, jr., of the United States District Court for Massachusetts, another character witness for Hiss.

Knew Him in School

A Harvard Law School graduate, Judge Wyzanski said he was in the class behind Hiss there, and had know Hiss since 1929.

In Washington, he said, he saw Hiss frequently while Wyzanski served with the Justice and Labor Departments and the National Defense Mediation Board.

Stressing that he was appearing "pursuant to my own request" and not under subpena, he testified that Hiss had a good reputation for integrity, loyalty and veracity.

The defense, seeking to stress that Hiss' office was easily accessible in the State Department in 1938, brought out that Judge Wyzanski had once entered it when Hiss was not present.

On September 23, 1938, he said, "I went to the office of Alger Hiss. I went into his room . . . I cannot state whether there was a secretary stationed in his office or outside of his office at the time . . . I waited in the office, he not being there."

He was asked by Murphy on cross-examination if he had not been "challenged or thrown out by Miss Lincoln?" (Miss Eunice A. Lincoln, private secretary in Sayre's office, who supervised both Sayre's and Hiss' offices).

Doesn't Know Her

"I don't know Miss Lincoln," he replied.

Murphy read from an article in the June 3, 1947, edition of the Boston Herald, stating:

"Unless a group is found criminal or treasonable, it should be allowed freedom of association, Judge E. Wyzanski, jr., of the Federal Court, contended yesterday in defending the decision of Harvard University to permit within the college a branch of the American Youth for Democrasy.

"Speaking at the annual exercises of the Harvard chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, the jurist maintained, with respect to the organization which has been termed a member of the Communist front, 'You cannot be certain whether groups termed subversive are termed so in error or in truth.'"

"Is that a correct quotation?" asked Murphy.

"I believe it is," replied Judge Wyzanski without hesitation. "And in any event—I believe it."

The trial will be resumed at 10:30 Monday.

Civitan International Adopts Antisubversive Resolution

Civitan International, concluding its twenty-ninth annual convention at the Hotel Shoreham, yesterday adopted unanimously a resolution "to oppose by word and deed any manifestation of subversive influence . . . specifically . . . communism," and to bar all Communists as Civitan members.

Support of the Hoover plan for Government reorganization was voted.

Awards of $25 each in a student essay contest went to Eileen Foster, Eastern High School, ninth place, and Huguette Veuthtey, Takoma Academy, tenth place.

The Civitan Achievement Trophy went to the Greenville, S. C., club for "outstanding service to the community and State." The Citizenship Trophy was awarded to the Johnson City, Tenn., club, for its youth activities program.

Boy's Rescuer Held on Charge By Railroad

Philadelphia, June 24 (U.P.).—A father and his two sons who slid under the wheels of a slowly moving freight train to make a dramatic rescue of an injured 12-year-old boy found themselves slightly less than heroes in the eyes of the law today.

Raymond Tomczak, 21 — who with his father, Joseph, 49, and his brother, Steven, 24, scrambled on hands and knees beneath the rolling freight cars to apply their belts as tourniquets to the legs of Joseph Loglisci—was held in $800 bail on trespassing charges preferred by a railroad policeman.

Joseph lost both feet when he was bounced from a truck at a grade crosing and rolled under the train. Pennsylvania Railroad police said the crossing was not a public highway, and that signs were posted warning against trespassing.

Race Violence Flares Anew In St. Louis

St. Louis, June 24 (AP).—Isolated disturbances between Negroes and whites broke out again last night as an aftermath of trouble that flared in a St. Louis park Tuesday. The violence began when city-owned swimming pools were temporarily opened to members of both races.

One white youth was seriously hurt and several other persons suffered minor injuries in separate incidents in scattered sections of the city.

Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell said extra police and squad cars will patrol the city for an indefinite period in view of the tense situation. He attributed all of the trouble to teen-agers.

Eleven persons were injured in a series of clashes at Fairground Park in North St. Louis Tuesday night.

Mayor Joseph M. Darst immediately rescinded a nonsegregation order issued the previous day by City Welfare Director John J. O'Toole.

The President's Calling List

Masons Will Join In Cathedral Rites

Thousands of Masons from the District, Maryland and Virginia will join in an outdoor service of prayer and thanksgiving at 2 p. m. Sunday at the Washington Cathedral.

Services in the outdoor amphitheater will be conducted by the Very Rev. John Wallace Suter, dean of the cathedral. He will be assisted by the cathedral clergy and the Rev. John C. Palmer, grand chaplain of the District of Columbia Masonic Lodge.

The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Edward Gardiner Latch, pastor of the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, Nebraska and New Mexico aves. nw.

Before the service there will be a procession of members of 48 lodges from 34th and Garfield sts. nw., at 1:30 p. m.

Uniformed units of Knights Templar, Scottish Rite, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, and the Grotto and Prophets will escort participating Master Masons as they pass in review before Grand Master Edwin S. Bettleheim, jr., and members of the Grand Lodge of Masons of the District of Columbia, which is sponsoring the event.

Dean Suter will also officiate at the 11 a. m. service of Litany and Ante-Communion and will be celebrant at the 7:30 a. m. service of Holy Communion in St. John's Chapel. The Rev. George J. Cleaveland will celebrate the 9:30 a. m. Holy Communion service in Bethlehem Chapel.

"Look Up at the Stars" will be Dr. Alfred W. Hurst's sermon topic at 11 a. m. at Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 3400 Lowell st. nw.

Church to Break Ground for Its Building Program

Ground for the first unit in a $400,000 building program will be broken at 11:45 a. m. Sunday by members of the First Presbyterian Church of Arlington, Va.

The congregation will go from the church at Glebe rd. and Wilson blvd. to the site of the new building at Carlyn Spring rd. and North Vermont st. at 11:45 a. m., immediately after the morning service.

The new educational building is the first unit of what will eventually be a complete church on the three and one-half acre site. It will include classrooms, offices and a pastor's study, and construction will be completed early in the fall.

L. Garland Kendrick, chairman of the board of trustees of the church, and Frank I. Lauckes, jr., building chairman, will turn the first spades of earth. The Rev. George H. Yount, pastor of First Church, will preside at the ceremonies.

Bishop Dun Plans Trip to England

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will sail Thursday for England to attend two meetings in Chichester.

From July 9 through 15 he will meet with the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches, which will deal with interim business of the council. July 16 through 20 he will meet with the Faith and Order Commission of the World Council.

The bishop will return to the United States early in August and will spend a month's vacation in Heath, Mass., with Mrs. Dun. He will return to Washington September 1 for two weeks before leaving for the triennial convention of the Episcopal Church in San Francisco.

St. Stephen's to Hold Novena June 29-July 7

A Mother Cabrini novena will be held at St. Stephen's Church, 25th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., from June 29 through July 7. The Rev. Anthony Pohle, SS.CC., will preach at the services, which will be at 5:20 and 7:45 p. m. daily. Masses will be at 6:30 and 7:30 a. m. each day.

Bible School to End

Concluding program of the vacation Bible school of Knox Orthodox Presbyterian Church, Granville dr. and Sutherland rd., Silver Spring, will be given Thursday at 7:45 p. m. at the church.

It's Vacation Church School Time

The Washington Post

HANDICRAFT—Some of the boys and girls attending vacation church school at Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, 1st and Rhode Island ave. nw., are making a model Palestinian village this summer. The school is sponsored jointly by Rhode Island Avenue Methodist, Memorial Evangelical United Brethren and Bethany Baptist churches. Carol Tsuda, 18 (left), an instructor, of 3914 Tunlaw ter. nw., observes the work of Daniel German, 10, 5009 13th st. nw. and Barbara Gleaton, 9, 138 V st. nw.

Federation's Youth Series Opens Sunday

The first in a summer series of outdoor meetings for young people will be held in the Grayson Gardens of the Sidwell Friends School, 3901 Wisconsin ave. nw., at 6:30 p. m. Sunday.

Theme of the series, which is sponsored by the Washington Federation of Christian Youth, is "The Church in Our Modern Society."

Services, which will be held on alternate Sunday evenings through August 21, are planned particularly for youth groups which do not meet during the summer months. In case of rain, no services will be held.

Speaker at the opening meeting will be the Rev. Carl Heath Kopf, minister of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw. He will speak on "How Our Society Challenges the Church."

Speakers at other meetings, and their topics are:

July 10, the Rev. C. Stanley Lowell, pastor of Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn st. nw., "How Jesus Confronted Life in His Day"; July 24, the Rev. Thomas A. Stone, assistant minister of National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., "You Can Make Your Job a Christian Vocation."

August 7, the Rev. Thomas M. Steen, director of the Department of Christian Education, Washington Federation of Churches, "Why Belong to a Church?" and August 21, the Rev. Don C. Shaw, chaplain, Lorton Reformatory, "What Must the Church Do?"

Mollegen Slated At St. Clement

The Rev. Albert T. Mollegen, professor of ethics and New Testament at the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, will preach at the church of St. Clement, 1701 Seminary rd., Alexandria, for the next seven Sundays.

Dr. Mollegen, who will fill the pulpit while the rector, the Rev. Darby Wood Betts, is in Europe, announced a series of sermons on fundamental Christian questions. On Sunday at 11 a. m. he will speak on "Where We Get the Revelation." Other sermons will be "Sin and Redemption," "The Incarnation," "The Atonement," "The Church," "The Eucharist" and "The Consummation."

D. C. Churches List Vacation Bible Schools

Presbyterians Plan Addition Start Sunday

Ground for an addition to Arlington Presbyterian Church, Columbia pike at South Lincoln st., Arlington, Va., will be broken immediately following the 11 a. m. service Sunday.

The Rev. Ralph K. Merker, stated clerk of the presbytery of Washington City and interim moderator of the church, will preside at the service.

Arlington church has been without a pastor since the Rev. Walter F. Wolf resigned to accept a pastorate in Cincinnati three weeks ago.

Ground breaking will mark the beginning of a $100,000 building program planned by the church. The plans call for the addition of an educational unit to the present building to provide space for separate assembly rooms and classrooms for church school departments, a pastor's study and church office.

In order to increase the seating capacity of the auditorium, the pews will be reversed and the chancel will be placed in the front of the building. The present front entrance will be closed and a new entrance and tower built on the Lincoln st. side of the building.

Additions and rearrangements will almost double the seating capacity of the church, making it possible for 400 persons to attend services.

Facilities for plays, movies and other entertainment will be built in the basement, which will also contain a large, new kitchen.

To speed up construction, the board of trustees of the church expects to move all church activities out of the building temporarily. Church school and church services will be held in Thomas Jefferson Junior High School until the work is completed early in 1950. The date of the first services in the school will be announced later.

Catholic Shrine Fund Reaches $1,853,000

Funds for the completion of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University have reached a total of $1,853,000, the Right Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the shrine has announced. Special collections are held annually in each Catholic diocese of the Nation to raise the necessary five million dollars to complete the building, he said.

Chaplain to Preach

Chaplain Charles I. Carpenter, Chief of Air Force Chaplains, will preach at Hamline Methodist Church, 16th and Allison sts. nw., at 11 a. m. Sunday.

Dr. Taylor Is First of Race To Head Presbyterian Synod

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Twenty years ago a Washington Negro pastor withdrew from sessions of the Baltimore Synod of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., at Hood College, Frederick, Md., after he was told he could not eat with his fellow churchmen because the college barred Negroes.

Last week that same minister, Dr. Halley B. Taylor, pastor of Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church, was elected moderator of the synod, the highest office in the regional organization, at a similar meeting at Hood College.

In the years between the two events, Dr. Taylor has become known as a leader of Presbyterianism in the Nation's Capital and has several times received the distinction of being the first man of his race elected to high posts in the local church.

First Test of Segregation

It was during his first year as a member of the Presbytery of Washington City, which is composed of 39 white and 3 Negro churches, that Dr. Taylor first faced Washington segregation.

The moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church was to visit the city and a dinner in his honor had been arranged at a Washington hotel.

Because the hotel refused to allow Negroes to dine there, Dr. Taylor found he would be unable to attend the dinner, though as a Presbyterian minister he was one of the hosts to the church dignitary.

Though his predecessors had never contested the tradition, Dr. Taylor carried the matter to the floor of the presbytery. He pointed out that the church was allowing itself to repudiate the fundamentals of brotherhood because of local custom. As a result, the presbytery protested and the hotel changed its ruling.

That same year, 1925, members of presbytery voted to send Dr. Taylor to the meeting of the General Assembly as one of the Washington commissioners, although as a rule commissioners have been members of presbytery for many years.

Since then, the Presbytery of Washington City has worked steadily toward a policy of nonsegregation in all of its activities. Today all of its conferences and camps are open equally to white and Negro children, and the presbytery will not approve or support any activity where the color line is drawn.

Work of Dr. Taylor

After the incident at Frederick, the Washington group began to fight for removal of segregation at synod meetings.

Each year, when the moderator of synod would visit presbytery, members would protest the situation. At one point a Washington white minister urged that presbytery cease its participation in synod meetings until the policy was changed.

Within five years, due at least in part to the work of Dr. Taylor and his supporters in Washington, there was no racial segregation at the meetings.

In 1937 Dr. Taylor was again named a commissioner to the General Assembly. As the man receiving the most votes in the election, he was leader of the delegation of two white ministers and three white elders from Washington.

During the 1939-40 Dr. Taylor served as moderator of the Presbytery of Washington City. As far as can be learned from the record, he was the first and only Negro elected to the post. Similarly, there is no record of a Negro ever being elected moderator of synod.

White presbyters have been largely responsible for Dr. Taylor's nomination and election to all of these offices. There were less than a dozen Negro ministers and laymen at the Frederick meeting, and no more than that number are members of the Presbytery of Washington City. (The Washington Presbytery nominated Dr. Taylor as moderator of synod.)

A native of New Bern, N. C., Dr. Taylor received A.B., M.A. and D. D. degrees from what is now Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, N. C. He was pastor of churches in Wilson, N. C., and Paterson, N. J., before coming to Washington.

Elsam Takes Pastorate in West Virginia

Chaplain Harold G. Elsam of Washington has accepted a call to the pastorate of Winchester Avenue Christian Church, Martinsburg, W. Va.

Elsam

Chaplain Elsam, who is assistant organization and training officer in the Office of the Chief of Chaplains, served as interim pastor of Mount Rainier Christian Church last spring and summer. At Martinsburg, he will succeed the Rev. Alfred C. Hofrichter, jr., who resigned his pastorate to become director of evangelism and laymen's work of the Disciples of Christ in Virginia.

Born in India, Chaplain Elsam was graduated from Philander Smith College there, Bethany College, Bethany, W. Va., and Butler University in Indianapolis. He entered the Army in 1942 and served as a chaplain in India during the war. The new pastor is editor of the Military Chaplain.

The Elsams are expected to move into the parsonage at Martinsburg early in August.

Dr. W. E. Roush, a member of the faculty of Bonebrake Theological Seminary, Dayton, Ohio, will preach at 11 a. m. at Memorial Evangelical United Brethren Church, 1700 North Capitol st.

"Tomorrow Is a Wonderful Day," a documentary film about the resettlement of a European boy in Israel, will be shown at a meeting of the Young People's Luther League at 7 p. m. in the parish hall of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle nw.

Sunday CHURCH EVENTS

The cornerstone of the $75,000 addition to Grace Methodist Church, New Hampshire and Kentland aves., Takoma Park, will be laid at ceremonies at 3 p. m.

Bishop Flint

Bishop Charles Wesley Flint, resident bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist Church, will conduct the ceremony and the Rev. Harold R. Hodgson, pastor of Grace Church, will preside.

A lead-coated box, containing a Bible, a copy of the Methodist Discipline, a hymnal, and a list of past and present church members will be included in the cornerstone. The new addition, which will triple the capacity of the present building, will be completed in November.

An old-fashioned hymn sing will take place at 8 p. m. at Chevy Chase Baptist Church, 5671 Western ave. nw. The service will be sponsored by the young people of the church.

Housing Bill Seems Certain of Passage

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Despite indication of a prolonged floor wrangle over various substitutes, which will last well into next week, success appears assured for the Administration's national housing bill as both sides yesterday added up the score.

Opponents of the measure—largest in the Nation's history—concede that their rosiest estimate show they are at least 30 votes short of enough votes to defeat the bill.

Democratic leaders, meanwhile, have boosted the margin by which they expect the House to pass the Senate-approved measure.

Representative J. Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), assistant Democratic floor leader, said last night after counting noses that the measure will sail through the House with 40 or 50 votes to spare.

Mrs. Bolton Offers Amendment

Mrs. Frances P. Bolton (R., O.) yesterday formally presented an amendment, jointly with nine other Republicans.

It calls for Federal aid for a big program of privately owned housing. Offered as a substitute for this was another amendment by Clifford Davis (D., Tenn.), which is in effect a complete new bill.

The House yesterday completed its general debate on the measure and made a start on the substitutes and amendments.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (A.L., N. Y.) suggested that opponents were filibustering the Administration measure after Representative Paul Shafer (R., Mich.) insisted that every word of the Bolton substitute be read to the House.

County Tags Get Setback From Court

Charges were dropped yesterday against more than 200 Arlington drivers ticketed because they did not have county license tags on their cars.

Police took the action after Arlington County Court Judge Harry R. Thomas, hearing six of the cases, found the law applied only to cars in operation, and not to parked autos.

Judge Thomas ordered also that $13.25 collateral posted by each of 20 defendants be returned if they call at Police Headquarters.

The county law prescribes fines for "any person who operates . . . any motor vehicle" in the county without displaying the tags. It makes no provision for parked cars.

After yesterday's hearing, Judge Thomas said that "in none of the cases was the Commonwealth ready to prove that the vehicle was in operation."

It was the second setback for Arlington's new auto tag law, imposed last winter. Earlier the county discovered its ordinance merely required drivers to buy the tags, not display them. The law was amended to plug this loophole.

The drive against county ordinance violators was pushed by Arlington police along with a round-up of Arlington motorists using out-of-State tags. Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard said about 800 drivers have received tickets for the latter offense.

Children Cry On Returning To Father, 32

New York, June 24 (U.P.).—A smiling father was reunited today with his four weeping children at the end of a six-month, cross-country battle.

The children were returned to Zoel Lynch, Coalinga, Calif., Sunday school teacher, by court order. They cried at having to leave their mother, Mrs. Marianne Lynch Teitelbaum.

"Their bodies will be in California, but their hearts will be here," Mrs. Teitlebaum shouted at the stormy reunion.

Lynch, 32, never stopped smiling. He tried to caress the children, but they brushed his hands away.

Mrs. Teitelbaum was under a court order to surrender the children at noon today to her former husband.

The children are Nancy Mae, 12; Thomas, 10; Mary Joe, 8, and Judith, 6.

The case began last December when Mrs. Teitelbaum's mother allegedly took the children from Lynch's home in California to New York. They had been awarded to him in the California divorce action.

The four children were baptized and confirmed as Catholics soon after they got to New York last Christmas. Their religion started a hot argument today.

Lynch, who belongs to the Church of Christ, said the children would return to "the religion of my household."

Mrs. Teitelbaum protested.

Her two children by Teitelbaum are being raised as Jews. She formerly adhered to the Catholic faith.

Mrs. Teitelbaum finally kissed the children goodby.

Lynch planned to take the children to California by plane tonight.

Catholic Group Plans Special Rites Here

The Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom will be celebrated by the Rev. W. Wozniak, according to the Byzantine-Slavonic rite at 10 a. m. every Sunday at the Carmelite Fathers' Chapel, 2131 Lincoln rd. ne. The Rev. McWozniak has been appointed to organize a parish here for Catholics of the Byzantine-Slavonic Rites.

prices paid producers should be made."

This was the only statement read by producers' spokesman Bruce B. Derrick, who at the hearing in March proposed a sliding scale which would have reduced the price paid producers for three months and then restored the cut for three months starting July 1.

Derrick admitted that production was unusually high this year—"something you get only about every quarter of a century."

Deficit Predicted

Speaking for the Alexandria Dairy, Michael H. Burchell, secretary-treasurer, said, "We cannot continue to absorb costs that exceed profits. I foresee that we will be in the red again this year unless we are offered relief."

Robert H. Rawlins, production manager for Chestnut Farms, said milk production costs are 10.3 per cent lower today than a year ago. Prices paid producers are thus relatively 12 cents a hundredweight higher now than last year despite the 50-cent cut, he said.

The distributors' spread has increased only 10.76 per cent since 1941, Rawlins said. Retail prices have gone up 42.86 per cent, he added, but producer prices have increased 70 per cent.

Under the price-cutting order issued by the commission last March, the cuts of 50 cents a hundredweight to the producers and of 1 cent in retail prices would be automatically restored July 1 unless the commission took further action. Retail price of home-delivered milk is now 20 cents a quart.

is under way—schools, highways, hospitals—that despite a 10 per cent drop in private home construction the year may establish a new record for total construction work.

The department foresaw a record total of 19 billion dollars, about 1 per cent over last year. The figure would represent an even greater increase in physical construction because of lower costs this year than last.

Public construction is expected to be up 23 per cent over last year. Total volume of all private construction is now expected to be about 5 per cent under last year in dollar volume. Industrial construction is due for the biggest decline, 28 per cent under 1948.

The Federal Security Agency's Bureau of Employment Security reported unemployment insurance claims declined in the week ended June 18, despite big increases in New York and Pennsylvania. Initial claims were down 47,631,- to 315,441, while continued claims were off 100,539, to 2,007,440.

For the Nation, the index on May 15 was still 26.9 per cent higher than when price controls ended in June, 1946, and 71.6 per cent over August, 1939. For Washington the comparable figures were 23.5 and 67.6 per cent.

Authority Bill Passed

The Senate yesterday passed a bill continuing the authority of the Maritime Commission to sell, charter and operate ships.

The measure now goes to the House for adjustment of minor differences with a version previously passed by the lower chamber.

Maryland Plans Highway Bonds

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—The State Roads Commission announced today it will issue $22,500,000 in bonds for highway construction.

The issue will be the first under a 100 million dollar road bond program authorized by the 1947 General Assembly.

Money borrowed on bonds will be added to current revenues to carry out five-year 200 million dollar road building project that began last year.

Freeman Due To Quit Paper For Writing

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Douglas Southall Freeman is retiring as editor of the Richmond News Leader to devote more time to literary work.

Freeman told The Washington Post yesterday the Associated Press would carry an announcement Thursday, but declined further comment.

Pulitzer prize-winning biographer of Robert E. Lee, in 1934, and one of the South's best-known editors, Freeman was 63 May 16.

Whether the resignation would affect his radio program was not learned. At the Richmond News Leader office it was said he was "not severing his connection entirely" with Richmond Newspapers, Inc., publisher of the News Leader and Times-Dispatch.

The delay in announcement of the resignation was understood to be at Freeman's own request.

Freeman, who spoke at a Washington Post Book and Author luncheon in December, in addition to his journalistic duties has been working on a six-volume biography of George Washington.

Two volumes, relating the first 27 years of Washington's life, were published last October. A third has been completed, and, with a fourth, probably will be published next year.

Freeman began his biography of Washington when his four-volume "R. E. Lee" was published. He interrupted it to write "Lee's Lieutenants," because he felt the earlier work inadvertently caused the other Confederate generals to be unduly overshadowed.

Confession Claimed In Icebox Murder

Grundy Center, Iowa, June 24 (U.P.).—Sheriff John A. Meyer said that Edwin Beckwith, 27, captured in a cornfield by a posse last night, admitted today that he killed Mrs. Harvey Stahlhut, 22, and hid her nude, mutilated body in a tavern refrigerator.

With Shirley Povich

A MANAGER'S PATIENCE with a slumping ball player has limites, so a couple of weeks ago Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians benched his shortstop, Lou Boudreau. Apparently it was a shrewd move because Rookie Ray Boone has been handling the job in the manner to which Boudreau, in his more nimble days, had accustomed the Indians.

POVICH

At this point, there is some evidence that Boudreau, the best player on the Cleveland ball club last season, can't make the team. He can offer only a .232 batting average in contrast to young Boone's lofty .321, and even Ken Keltner, in one of his sorrier seasons at bat, is outhitting his manager.

On the face of it, it's the biggest comedown of the last 12 months in baseball. Boudreau was the ipcomparable hot article last season when he hit .353, roamed shortstop as well as any man since Wagner, and was the inspirational leader of the 1948 pennant winners. When he signed for an $80,000 salary in 1949, Boudreau was virtually tossing in his managerial services gratis, he was that valuable a ballplayer.

But this is no attempt to write the guy out of the Cleveland lineup. The high suspicion is that he will still be playing ball for the Indians for several years.

THE NATURAL MOVE for Boudreau is to third base. He has already perceived it and taken one fling at the position, where the aging Ken Keltner is no longer the indispensable man. Third base, with its narrower territory, would be easier on Boudreau's creaking legs and weak ankles that took too much punishment on hard basketball floors.

Boudreau's legs may have slowed up on him, but there is nothing the matter with what always were his fast pair of hands, more important to a third baseman than the range he can cover. On the day when Boudreau does decide to take over the Indians' third base job, their worries over that position will be at an end.

He was playing third base for a spell in Yankee Stadium the other day, when Phil Rizzuto laid down one of his good bunts. Rizzuto was astounded to hear the ball bang into First Baseman Mickey Vernon's mitt a step before he reached the bag. "Nobody ever threw me out before on a bunt as good as that," said Rizzuto in tribute to Boudreau after the game.

ON THE DAY when Boudreau does hang up his glove and retire to the bench management of the Indians, it could be a sad day for that club. One of Boudreau's charms as a manager was his command of the situation on the field and his ability to make the tough plays when they counted most. He wasn't asking his ball players to do anything he couldn't do himself.

The Indians reacted to Boudreau's on-the-field leadership. It could be different when he retires to the bench. Mickey Cochrane's managerial career may be in point. When he was catching for the Tigers, leading 'em, prodding 'em with his own tremendous hustle and fiery example, they won pennants. When a bean ball ended his playing career and he was forced to manage from the dugout, they won no more pennants for him.

The same experience belonged to Bucky Harris a decade before. In 1924-25 when Harris was the sparkplug manager-second baseman of the Nats, he literally led them to pennants. When he took himself out of the lineup in subsequent seasons, the club lost its valuable on-the-field leadership.

A YEAR AGO at this point, Boudreau made the prophetic declaration that "we'll win or lose with Bob Feller." The Feller of 1948 like the Feller of this season, was off to a sour start and giving no indication that he would pitchthe Indians close to the pennant. But he came along fast in the last three months and gave the Indians a tremendous lift. If he didnt win the pennant for them personally, then the fact remains that they couldn't have won it without him.

The Indians are still close enough to repeat, and Feller is in the same position as last season—off to another bad start and showing only three wins against six defeats before last night. But up at Yankee Stadium the other day he was a semblance of the old Feler, giving the Yankees only one hit after the fourth inning to beat 'em.

It was Rookie Gene Bearden who took up most of the slack last year when Feller won "only" 19 games. Bearden at this time is acting like a one-year wonder, with a record of merely five won against five lost. It could be turn-about this season, with Feller finding his old skill and offsetting, for the Indians, Bearden's slump.

Mrs. Manush Dies

Detroit, June 24 (AP).—Mrs. Betty Manush, 46, wife of former major league baseball star Henry Emmett "Heinie" Manush, died here today at Harper Hospital.

Veeck Says Tribe Is For Sale But Has No Offer

Cleveland, June 24 (AP).—President Bill Veeck says his Cleveland Indians baseball club, 1948 world champs, can be bought, but that no one has made him an offer or approached him about making one.

Sports Editor Gordon Cobbledick wrote in today's Cleveland Plain Dealer that a syndicate of businessmen is forming to buy the Indians and would "be ready in the near future to make a formal offer of approximately two million dollars." Cobbledick said George Creadon, president of the Standard Brewing Co., headed the syndicate.

Veeck, reached on a speech-making visit in Columbus, Ohio, said he has received rumors of the reported syndicate offer for about two weeks. He called it 'conversation which is likely to remain conversation.

Bosox Run Wild, 21-2; Williams Hits Two Homers

Boston, June 24 (AP).—Ted Williams paced a 25-hit attack with his eighteenth and nineteenth homers today as the Boston Red Sox crushed the injury-riddled St. Louis Browns, 21-2.

The lanky slugger, who drove in seven runs to boost his 62-game total to 77, sewed up the game against Joe Ostrowski in the first inning by driving into the centerfield stand after Dom DiMaggio had singled and Johnny Pesky doubled.

Williams' second four-bagger of the day came while leading off in the seventh against Ray Shore, the last of three victims of the savage onslaught.

Ellis Kinder held the Browns to five hits, including homers by Whitey Platt and Andy Anderson. Kinder retired the last 13 men to face him while chalking up his seventh pitching win.

While Ostrowski, Al Papai and Shore were throwing a total of 189 pitches, Billy Goodman bashed out four singles and a double to boost his batting average 22 points to .324.

DiMaggio hit safely four times and Pesky and Williams and Vern Stephens each connected thrice. Bobby Doerr was the only Red Socker limited to one hit and Catcher Birdie Tebbetts was the only one who failed to cross the plate.

The Browns, who came here with only eight pitchers, now have used up four of them at the halfway mark of their four-game Fenway visit.

Cards Win, 8-4 Take Lead

St. Louis, June 24 (AP).—The onrushing St. Louis Cardinals took over the top perch of the National League for the first time this season tonight when they downed the Boston Braves, 8 to 4, while the Brooklyn Dodgers were taking the count at Pittsburgh.

Two home runs by Lou Klein and another by Tommy Glaviano were the big blows in the victory which delighted 18,000 fans.

Mickey Owen Joins Dodgers And Says He's 'Ready to Play'

Pittsburgh, June 24 (AP).—Mickey Owen, former Brooklyn Dodger whose five-year suspension was lifted by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler a short time ago, rejoined the club tonight.

Owen, who admitted he is 33 years old-not the 32 carried in the official record books—said he was "ready to play."

Manager Burt Shotton wasn't immediately available for comment and there was no indication how soon Owen might get into the lineup. The Dodgers are well fortified in the catching department with Roy Campanella and Bruce Edwards.

Fred Martin 2d Jumper With Cards

St. Louis, June 24 (AP).—Pitcher Fred Martin today became the second league-jumper to rejoin the St. Louis Cardinals.

Owner Fred M. Saigh signed up Martin this afternoon, reportedly at $7500. The first jumper to rejoin his mates here was Lou Klein, a utility infielder.

Easter, Coast Star, Gets Knee Examined

San Diego, Calif., June 24 (AP).—The Pacific Coast League's Luke Easter, Negro batting star, currently at .363, is flying to Cleveland tonight to have an injured knee examined.

The San Diego baseball club, for whom he plays first base, emphasized he has a roundtrip ticket.

Easter's knee has been a major concern of Coast League fans in general and the San Diego management in particular. An old injury has bothered him and extensive X-ray and clinical examinations have been made. An operation has been suggested.

Mrs. Bower Tops Mrs. Stokes To Retain WDGA Title, 2 And 1

By Leila Edwards

Mrs. A. B. Bower of Manor Country Club successfully defended her title yesterday at Columbia Country Club in the final round of the Women's District Golf Association championship, winning from Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, also of Manor, 2 and 1.

It was a contest that was decided, for the most part, on the greens. They played shot for shot from tee to green, but Mrs. Bower's putter refused to work for her at the beginning of the match, and she was two down at the end of the first nine holes.

Then, for the second successive day, the winner regained her game, and came back to win the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth holes, shooting straight pars to go 2 up on her opponent.

Mrs. Stokes got one hole back on the dogleg fourteenth with a par 4 when Mrs. Bower had trap trouble, and took a 6. The defending champion was still 1 up. The fifteenth was halved with 4's.

Mrs. Stokes then, for the second time, three-putted to lose an easy par 3 hole to go 2 down and 2 to go.

They halved the seventeenth, and the title was Mrs. Bower's for another year.

Their cards:

Mrs. Bower	554	365	535—41
	445	364	34
Mrs. Stokes	444	463	435—39

Kiner's 2 Hits Beat Bums, 4-2

Pittsburgh, June 24 (AP).—Ralph Kiner's first-inning homer with two aboard and his eighth inning single were the only safeties Pittsburgh could get off Brooklyn pitchers tonight but they were enough to defeat the league leaders, 4-2.

A crowd of 34,670 saw big Ernie Bonham go the route to register his third win against one defeat.

It was the first start for the 6-year-old Assault since he was injured in the Widener Handicap at Hialeah, February 21, 1948.

Cubs Clout Giants by 6-2

Chicago, June 24 (AP).—The last place Chicago Cubs slapped down the sliding New York Giants, 6-2, today with big Hank Sauer supplying the punch with a three-run homer.

Sauer unloaded his eighth four-bagger of the season in the first inning off Larry Jansen following singles by Emil Verban and Hank Edwards.

The Cubs cemented the decision and chased Jansen in the third with another three run drive.

Plays Miss Suggs for Title

Betty Jameson Gains Finals By Beating Polly Riley, 2-1

Oklahoma City, June 24 (AP).—Professional Betty Jameson of San Antonio whipped amateur Polly Riley of Fort Worth, 2 and 1, today to become a finalist in the Women's Western Open golf championship match tomorrow against professional Louise Suggs.

Miss Suggs, Carrollton, Ga., chipped onto the green for birdies on the fifteenth and seventeenth holes to defeat defending champion Patty Berg, 1 up, in their semifinal match.

Miss Berg, after being one down throughout the eighth, shot birdies on 9 and 10 to tie the match. She shot a par three on the eleventh to go one-up. Both women shot par on the twelfth. The methodical Miss Suggs scored par on the thirteenth to tie the match. Both went through the fourteenth in par—and then came No. 15.

Miss Suggs was five feet off the green on her shot carried birdie. This put her one-up. Miss Berg bounded back with a birdie on the sixteenth to even the match. It was the seventeenth which produced the most sparkling shot of the tourney. Miss Suggs chipped her second gem of the day—a 45-footer which carried through to the hole. Then she sank a six-foot putt to halve the final hole and take the match.

Harrison Still Leads Canadian

Toronto, June 24 (AP).—E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., held his lead in the Canadian Open golf championship today by shooting a 71 which gave him a three-round total of 204. The fourth and final round will be played tomorrow.

Harrison's closest pursuers were Dick Metz of Virginia Beach, Va., with 207, and Gerry Barber of Los Angeles with 208.

'Gussie' Moran Bows To Tiny Chinese Girl

By Bill Macklin

London, June 24 (AP).—Gertrude (Gorgeous Gussie) Moran of Santa Monica, Calif., the darling of the Wimbledon tennis championships, bowed out of the women's singles today in the first week's greatest upset.

Her red-ribboned pigtails bobbing, the fourth-seeded Miss Moran went down to Gem Hoahing, a tiny Chinese ballet dancer from Hongkong, 6—2, 5—7, 6—3, in the third round.

Gussie lost through a host of errors—netted volleys and untamed drives. She was fidgety, too hasty, and never settled down to her attacking game that could have won the match.

The little Gem, well under 5 feet tall, and too short to play the net, never left the baseline. But there she swung back Gussie's attack.

Gussie smiled bravely as she walked out of the famous center court cheered by 14,000 fans. But she left some sad faces among the newsmen and fans, who have found her the greatest personality since Suzanne Lenglen of France 25 years ago.

She will be missed from the singles. With her beauty and lace-trimmed panties she brought a spice to Wimbledon that had been lacking in the postwar years of dominance by other American women, who just came and conquered with routine perfection.

Behind the scenes, the Wimbledon championship committee expressed concern at British press treatment of Bob Falkenburg of Beverly Hills, Calif., the defending men's champion.

Some of the newsmen have bounced Bob because he withdrew from mixed doubles, refused interviews, and rested through two sets yesterday in beating Josef Asboth of Hungary.

Fearing that Americans might take offense, a senior Wimbledon official today asked newsmen to let the champ get on with his task in his own sweet way.

Schroeder, Mulloy Advance

Falkenburg appeared once. He and Jaroslav Drobny of Czechoslovakia eliminated Pierre Geelhand and Jacques Peten of Belgium, 6—4, 6—4, 6—4, in the second round of men's doubles.

The top-seeded doubles team, Ted Schroeder of La Crescenta, Calif., and Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla., played two matches and won both in straight sets, advancing to the quarter finals.

They ousted Britishers A. L. Della Porta and H. Watkins, 6—1.

Henrich's Hit Beats Tigers, 5-4

New York, June 24 (AP).—Clutch hitting and pitching by Tommy Henrich and Lefty Joe Page, respectively, earned the American League's pace-setting New York Yankees a 5-4 decision over the Detroit Tigers today. Yogi Berra drove in four of the Yanks' runs with a double and homer.

Henrich singled home Charley Keller from second with the winning run in the seventh inning after the Tigers had snarled the count at 4-4 in their half with a three-run rally.

Page, who snuffed out the Tiger uprising, blanked the Bengals over the final two frames. The Tigers loaded the bases in the ninth with two down but Page got Rookie Johnny Groth to pop out to second sacker Gerry Coleman to end the game.

Berra doubled home two runs in the first and belted his eighth homer with a mate aboard in the sixth to give the Yanks an early lead.

Allie Reynolds opened for the Yanks and after a rough first round during which the Tigers scored on Ed Lake's triple and Vic Wertz' fly ball, settled down until the seventh when a walk, a hit batsman, a double and a single brought Page in.

Chisox Beat Macks Behind Gumpert, 2-1

Philadelphia, June 24 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox scored their second win of the season over Philadelphia's Athletics tonight, 2-1, as Randy Gumpert went the distance to hang up his sixth American League pitching triumph. The loss pushed the A's deeper into second, 5½ games out of first.

3 Near Fights Mar Game; Kennedy Has Inside Homer

By Morris Siegel

Cleveland played like the world's champions they are while the Nats performed strictly like the Nats and the result was a simple 8-2 triumph for the Indians last night.

After attracting 23,018 customers, Bob Feller proceeded to distract the Nats with a crafty seven-hit job to deposit his fourth hurling success, the last three in succession.

Although they lost all parts of the ball game, the Nat. did manage to get a standoff in three arguments which threatened to disrupt into fights.

The first pitted Ed Stewart against Catcher Jim Hegan over Stewart's use of a bat which Hegan claimed was stained above the handle, which is not legal.

Stewart Rows Twice

Plate Umpire Bill Summers ruled Stewart's bat was entirely legal, but while he pondered a decision Hegan and Stewart were on the verge of tangling until they were parted by Summers and players.

As soon as peace was restored temporarily, in the eighth inning, Stewart and Coach Bill McKechnie, who came out to attend the rumpus at the plate, were at each other, but they, too, were sent their respective ways.

Chapter Three of the rhubarb, which the crowd was now warming up to, came as the teams exchanged sides and this one featured 24-year-old Gil Coan and the 61-year-old McKechnie again.

Coan and McKechnie, who exchanged words, were coming at each other when players from both teams intervened and stopped that nonsense. Order was finally restored again and the Indians proceeded to make their victory official.

That the throng revelled in the rumpus was understandable inasmuch as the Nats gave them practically nothing to cheer about

Crawford Paces Cameo Over Thrifty

With Shortstop Rufe Crawford driving in as many runs as the opposition, Cameo Furniture nine swept to an 11-6 triumph over Thrifty Liquors in a Washington Post-Industrial League game yesterday on the Ellipse.

Crawford batted in his six runs with a two run single in the fourth inning and a bases-loaded home run in the fifth.

Kenny Deavers limited Thrifty to three runs before going out for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. His victory strengthened Cameo's lead in the second half, giving the first-half champions a record of four won and one lost.

Wisconsin Rated Best Upset Hope

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 24 (AP).—Wisconsin gained support tonight as the crew that might supply the drama in the forty-seventh annual Poughkeepsie regatta tomorrow but California and Washington ruled firmly as favorites.

Decisive victor over Navy, and barely nosed out by mighty Washington, Wisconsin was tagged in an informal poll of a half dozen varsity coaches as third best in the record field of 12, with a chance for an upset.

The East's chief hope is Princeton, which has defeated every other Eastern entry.

The rivalry of the Western crew giants, almost of grudge proportions, overshadows the race.

In the space of a year California has twice humiliated Washington in a way that hurts. Last year Washington won all three races at Poughkeepsie and looked confidently to the Olympics but California won the eight-oared trials and captured the Olympic championship for the United States.

Then this spring Washington led California 150 feet from the finish in their race at Seattle when a Washington oarsman missed a stroke and the crew became confused, losing by a few feet.

The poll of varsity coaches gave this consensus on the order of finish in the big three-mile race tomorrow:

1—California. 2—Washington. 3—Wisconsin. 4—Princeton. 5—Stanford. 6—Pennsylvania. 7—Cornell. 8—Navy.

Columbia, Rutgers, Massachusetts Tech, and Syracuse complete the field.

Weather and water permitting, the freshman race will start at 3 p. m. EST, the junior varsity at 3:45 and the varsity at 4:30. Thirty crews in all are competing.

Riegel Defeated In Golf Upset

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 24 (AP).—Fred Newton of Denver bumped the usually steel-nerved Skee Riegel out of the Trans-Mississippi Golf tournament today with a surprising 4 and 2 semi-finals victory.

Charles Coe of Ardmore, Okla., defeated 19-year-old E. J. Rogers, jr., of Oklahoma City, 2 and 1, to advance into the finals opposite Newton. They will meet at 9 a. m. (MST) tomorrow in the 36-hole title match.

Yale Crew Beats Harvard In Rowing Upset of Year

New London, Conn. June 24 (AP).—A smart Yale varsity halted a Harvard victory streak at 10 here today in the upset of the year—winning about 20 feet in America's only four-mile crew race. Both shells shot across the finish line in upstream course record time.

Yale, stroked by Dick Krementz, rowed a heavy race, and withstood a killing Harvard challenge in the stretch to win in 19 minutes 52.8 seconds. The Crimson was timed in 19:54.4. The course record was 20:02 registered by Harvard in 1937.

Yale, which last licked Harvard varsity in 1935, also scored in the junior varsity race, winning by one and three-quarter lengths. The victors won in 9:36. Harvard's time was 9:42.6.

Harvard's freshmen opened the three-race program on the silvery Thames River by beating the Blue Cubs by two-thirds of a length in 9:32. Yale was caught in 9:34.6. These two brushes were over the two-mile mark.

The eighty-fourth renewal of America's oldest intercollegiate rivalry brought out a crowd of about 35,000 on both banks of the river and a flotilla of about 450 yachts—the biggest since the prewar plush days.

Probably nobody got any more satisfaction out of the unexpected Yale triumph than its coach, Allen (Skip) Walz, a former heavyweight boxer and New York U. footballer. His three-year contract comes up for renewal soon. It also was Yale's and his first varsity boat triumph over Harvard since Coach Tom Bolles took charge of the Cambridge lads in 1936.

Walz celebrated by jumping into the cold Thames after the race—a promise he had made his underdogs if they won.

Horse Shows Listed Today

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

A pair of shows will occupy the area's horse lovers today as the Arlington Lions Club stages its sixth annual event at Washington-Lee High Stadium, in Arlington, and the thirteenth annual Warrenton Pony Show starts a two-day stand at the Warrenton (Va.) Show Grounds.

The Lions' Club affair opens at 10 a. m.; the Warrenton Show an hour earlier.

In Arlington a total of 28 classes will be observed, including three pony classes for each size division, two junior contests and the remainder of the 17 events divided between saddle horses, hunters and jumpers with a few miscellaneous Western exhibitions and novelty events thrown in.

Seven trophies and $1125 in cash awards are offered for an above-average show.

The program for Warrenton's two-day show lists 34 classes, divided into small, intermediate and large pony divisions. There will be events for green pony hunters, working hunters, conformation derivative in a saliva test after her winning race at Rosecroft.

At its hearing, the commission said it decided to give Jimmy, official trainer of the horse, the "benefit of the doubt."

Alan continued to make it a winning night when he drove Joy Wynn to a $13 victory in the final event. He tied Tom Lewis for the night with two winners. Lewis scored with an outsider, Nora Abbe ($27.60) in the seventh, and Ann Frisco ($15) in the fourth.

Longshots definitely were the fashion at Laurel's initial offering and the daily double duo—Miss Stuck Up and Jean Chief (4 and 10)—returned $184.40 to 44 fortunate betters.

Only favorite to score was Joe Mallalieu's Josedale Counsel, who took the $1000 trot offering at a mile and a sixteenth and paid $7.

William E. Miller, forbidden by the racing commission from driving at his Rosecroft track, returned to action in the third race, but was beaten 20 lengths and finished ninth in the 10-horse field with Scarlet Hanover.

Laurel continued to be coy about announcing its attendance. First "official" figure was 11,720 but the betting didn't indicate that many were on hand. The handle did reach $236,560 which still represented a sizeable increase over the 167,096 bet on the first night last year.

Aside from the chalk players, principal casualty for the night was Scot Free who dropped dead shortly after crossing the finish line in the first race.

Paul Vineyard's 4-year-old son of Scotland, valued at $10,000, died after staging a courageous stretch drive that enabled him to finish second to Miss Stuck Up in a photo.

Mrs. Norton Wins

Washington Golf and Country Club's "hidden hole tournament" for women yesterday was won by Mrs. E. M. Norton, who finished with a 48-9-39. Mrs. Edwin Goetz, 56-15-41, was second.

D. C. Boatmen Hit Road This Weekend

By Happy Walker

WASHINGTON boating enthusiasts take to the road this weekend to participate in widely scattered aquatic events from New Jersey to Virginia.

Walker

The canoe crowd, both racing and canvas, will trek up to Barbour's Pond, Paterson, N. J., to enter the New Jersey State championships, of the American Canoe Association. Among those leaving Saturday morning are: Walt Seelig, Jack Schmid, Charles Barndt, Spike Geweski, George Bacon, Bill Eiseman and Bill Schorr.

Closer to home, the Wilson Point Men's Club at Middle River, Baltimore, will stage their annual Inboard Speedboat Regatta Saturday and Sunday. Getting their charges ready are Aubrey Thacker, Roy Bagley, Ted Wege, Earle Hildebrand, J. Stanley Ludwig, C. W. Lusby and the unpredictable Joe Palmer, all from Washington who are determined to capture some of the top honors.

For the flying pancake devotees, the Radford J. C. sanctioned regatta at Radford, Va., will offer a well-rounded schedule of outboard races on Sunday, which will have many of the Nation's top contenders shooting at world records. Jimmy Baden, Dean Wooster, Hudson Moses, Jim Braddus and Ike Hale will be among the entries from Washington.

Odds and Ends: Earle Hildebrand, popular local boat racer, is honored with his picture in his new 48 C. I. hydroplane on the cover of this month's Chesapeake Skipper . . . The 1949 Annual Year Book of the APBA has just been issued to all members . . . Dr. Samuel W. Johnson, Washington's only dentist afloat, will up anchor his Ted Avon this week for Eastern Shore ports . . . Jacob Crain, D. C. Housing official, rounded Chesapeake Lightship late yesterday in the Newport-Annapolis Yacht race, hoping to make the finish line before Saturday . . . Area skipper of Penguins, Comets and Thistles will be represented at the Fairhaven Sailing Club's events Saturday and Sunday on Chesapeake Bay . . . This afternoon members of the P. R. P. S. join with members of the Capital Yacht Club on the first leg of their nine-day Mobjack cruise to the lower reaches of Chesapeake Bay.

Favored Pros In Semifinals

Forest Hills, N. Y., June 24 (AP). Don Budge of Los Angeles and Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., completed an all-favorites semifinal with easy, straight victories today in the National Professional Tennis championships.

The second-seeded Budge conquered Elwood Cooke of New York, seventh-ranked, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2. Kovacs, No. 3, expelled eighth-seeded John Nogrady of New York, 6—2, 6—4, 6—4.

They joined the top-ranked Bobby Riggs of Altadena, Calif., and fourth-seeded Welby Van Horn of Philadelphia, who attained the round of four yesterday.

In tomorrow's semifinals, Riggs will play Van Horn and Budge will take on Kovacs. The championship round will be staged Sunday.

Hybla Speedway Has Benefit Today For Cash's Family

Hybla Valley Speedway undergoes its first Saturday racing today as the Eastern Roadster Racing Club stages a program starting with time trials at 1:30 p. m.

Benefiting from the event, postponed from last Sunday, will be the widow and two children of Ronnie Cash, Alexandria driver who was killed in a racing accident on June 5.

Topping entries will be Dick Frazier, Midwestern champion from Muncie, Ind. He will introduce his new No. 32 Mercury-powered machine as he makes his first appearance in the East since winning the 100-lap Eastern Roadster Racing championship at Williams Grove, Pa., last fall.

29 Skaters Compete At Alexandria Tonight

Twenty-nine skaters from the National Arena and seven skaters from the home rinks will compete tonight in final Washington area competition at the Alexandria Arena for the National Championships in Mineola, N. Y., next week.

Among the favorites are John Bernhard, Alice Williams, Jim Calder, Danny Ryan, Bob Terry, Bill Conner, Arward Williams and Danny Brooke.

Kwariana, Macricostas Added to Mat Card

Nats Lose to Indians, 8-2; Feller Allows Only 7 Hits

tion to Feller's sixth-inning triple, the Indians, who are now in fourth place only one came out of second, also larruped seven singles and one home run.

The circuit blow was an inside-the-park smash by right fielder Bob Kennedy in the seventh inning against Dick Welteroth, who relieved Starter Joe Haynes.

Haynes worked only long enough to be blamed for his third defeat. He hurled a three-run second inning and when he had been laced for two more runs in the fifth, out he came.

Buddy Lewis and Sam Dente were Feller's chief tormentors, getting two hits apiece. Dente opened the third with a triple to left and for a while it appeared he would languish there, but Lewis came to his rescue with a single with two away to score Washington's first run.

In the seventh inning, Dente beat out an infield hit to score Stewart who had singled and been driven to third by Eddie Robinson's single.

Larry Doby, who got only one hit but who tallied three times to outscore the Nats by himself, started Haynes' downfall in the second which he opened with a bunt. Joe Gordon walked. Ken Keltner bunted in front of the mound and when Haynes threw low to Sherry Robertson at third, Doby came on in, Gordon going to third, scoring on Kennedy's infield hit.

Kennedy's Homer Scores Doby

Two walks and singles by Gordon and Keltner moved the Indians in front, 51, in the fifth and also expelled Haynes. Feller tripled to left center to knock in Hegan, who had walked, with the sixth Cleveland run.

Kennedy accounted for the last two by lashing out his homer to deep center in the seventh with Doby, who had walked, scoring in front of him.

The Nats had runners on second and third with one away in the eighth, but they stayed there as Feller disposed of Stewart and Robinson.

Feller gave up his seventh hit, a single to Al Kozar, n the ninth but Catcher Ralph Weigel dissipated that Meager threat by grounding into a game-ending double play.

Gussie Beaten At Wimbledon

6—0, 6—4, in the second round and turned their hot rackets on M. Matous of Czechoslovakia and Franjo Puncec of Yugoslavia for a 6—1, 6—4, 6—1 triumph in the third round.

Pancho Gonzales and Frankie Parker, both of Los Angeles, gained the third round by downing Drago Mitic and Josip Palada, the Yugoslav Davis Cup team that is in the European zone semifinals, 8—6, 6—2, 6—3.

In women's singles, Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, and Mrs. Margaret Du Pont of Bellevue, Del., cleared easy third round hurdles in their jog to an almost inevitable final July 2.

Louise drubbed Mrs. Mary Halford, former British Wightman Cup player, 6—1, 6—0. Mrs. Du Pont eliminated Mrs. R. F. Chandler of Britain 6—1, 6—1. Miss Brough lost only three points in the second set.

Mrs. Du Pont and her mixed doubles partner, Billy Sidwell of Australia, slaughtered Erik Bjerre and Miss E. M. Fog of Denmark, 6—2, 6—1. The consensus is that this pair will meet the defending champions, Miss Brough and John Bromwich of Australia, in the final.

Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, and Mrs. Helen Rihbany of Boston reached the third round of women's doubles with a 6—3, 6—0 win over Helena Straubeova of Czechoslovakia and Miss J. Marcellin

Peoples Drug Elevates Trio To High Posts

By S. Oliver Goodman

George B. Burrus was elevated yesterday to executive vice president of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., succeeding the late J. G. Bell.

Burrus

Paylor

Two other promotions included T. B. Gill and Russell S. Paylor to vice presidents, according to President T. N. Beavers. Paylor also was elected to the board of directors, filling the vacancy of the late Mr. Bell.

Burrus, formerly a vice president, has been associated with the drug store chain since May, 1923. He started as a soda dispenser. He served in various capacities, including a period in Akron, Ohio, until 1934, when he came back to Washington as advertising director of the chain. In 1940 he was elected vice president in charge of operations and in 1945 he was added to the directorate.

Gill, division manager in charge of Washington area stores, started in 1923 as a drug clerk. He advanced successively to pharmacist, assistant store manager and then served as store manager at various locations, including one at 15th and G sts. nw. He next became district manager here, was transferred to the same job for the eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania district, then came back here as division manager.

Paylor, director of real estate and construction, began in 1917 as a clerk. He served in World War I, came back to Peoples Drug, was advanced successively to store manager, warehouse manager, district manager and assistant to general manager.

CONSISTENT: A dividend record with few equals in Washington financial history was continued yesterday when Terminal Refrigerating & Warehousing Corp. declared a 147th consecutive semiannual payment of $1.50 a share on capital stock. The dividend is payable June 30 to stock of record June 24.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Chester J. Berry, store manager of Mayer & Co., Washington furniture dealers, will mark today his fortieth year of service to the company. The firm is presenting him with a gift of U. S. Savings Bonds as a token of appreciation . . . Douglas R. Smith, assistant to the president of National Savings & Trust Co., is in the freshman class of the Rutgers Graduate School of Banking . . . Richard T. Schatz of Spokane, Wash., is the new president of the National Retail Credit Association.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the week ended June 18 dipped 1 per cent under the same 1948 week, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted yesterday. For the four weeks ended June 18, local sales were unchanged from last year. Regionally, store sales slipped 5 per cent for the week and 4 per cent for the four-week period.

PEPCO NET UP: Mainly reflecting increased rates, net income of Potomac Electric Power Co. spurted 39 per cent in May and 22.3 per cent in the first five months this year over the same 1948 periods. May net amounted to $318,028, while the five-month period showed $2,029,085. The percentage increases over last year are specially notable, because income during the first five months of 1948 was swelled about $465,700 under a transfer from reserve account. No similar amount has been recorded this year.

DIP IN SALES: Safeway Stores reports sales in four weeks ended June 18 totaled $92,514,135, a decline of 5.5 per cent from $97,919,205 in the like period last year. For 24 weeks ended June 18 sales of $561,246,802 were 5.1 per cent under $591,289,312 a year earlier.

OFFICERS SEATED: New officers of the D. C. Association of Insurance Agents were installed yesterday at the annual outing at the Indian Spring Country Club. They are: John H. Pumphrey, president; V. Manning Hoffman, first vice president; Henry Dudley, second vice president; William A. d'Espard, secretary, and George S. Denton, treasurer. Guest of honor was Albert Jordan, District superintendent of insurance.

Maryland Tobacco

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—Quality was better in tobacco auctioned on southern Maryland markets today.

The United States Department of Agriculture and Maryland Department of Markets noted slightly higher percentages of good and fine tobacco. Average prices for most grades were about the same as yesterday, when auction sales totaled 330,814 pounds at an average of $54.70 per hundredweight.

Average auction bid prices for hundred pounds on a limited number of representative U. S. grades today:

Heavy crop—Good cherry-red, 67; fair cherry-red, 63; fair red, 44; low cherry-red, 48.

Pending Agreements Permit 3 Agencies To Add New Jobs

Three major Federal agencies would each have a few new jobs under tentative agreements reached by the Senate and the House on their 1950 budgets. They are the Agriculture and Labor Departments and the Federal Security Agency. This is the lineup:

AGRICULTURE: Its Bureau of Agricultural Economics was given $2,390,000, plus two million dollars additional to make economic investigations. A lay-off smaller than had been anticipated will be made . . . Funds were carried in the bill to restore the jobs of 185 meat inspectors originally knocked out by the House.

FOREST SERVICE will escape a major lay-off. The House knocked out about 450 of its jobs but most of them were restored by the conferees. The agency was given $26,300,000 for forest management instead of the $24,900,000 first approved by the House, and it was given $10,348,000 for forest development. The conferees agreed on $9,500,000 for flood control projects.

SOIL CONSERVATION will have the largest expansion of any Agriculture agency. The hiring will be in new soil districts. However, the agency will have to lay off a few employes on its research projects. It was given $1,400,000 for this work, or nearly $500,000 more than was first allowed by the House. A school lunch program costing $83,500,000 was approved, or $8,500,000 more than the House had previously voted . . . FARMERS HOME was given $23,648,000, a sum which will prevent threatened lay-offs.

The conferees approved a rider to prevent the payment of salary to any regional or State "information employe" assigned to the activities of the Agricultural Adjustment Agency. The amendment emphasized, however, that the questions of farmers should be answered at county committee levels.

LABOR: The Secretary's Office was given $1,154,000, or $80,000 more than the House allowed. The solicitor's office was given $1,093,900, the amount it asked for. The Bureau of Labor Standards was given $550,000, the Senate figure, instead of the $391,000 approved by the House. The Bureau of Labor Statistics was given $5,506,500 instead of the lower House figure.

Wage and Hour was given $5,252,000 instead of $5,361,000 as first approved by the House. A rider, however, will transfer its youth employment and child labor research activities to the Bureau of Labor Standards.

FSA: Its Bureau of Employment Security can make a small staff increase with the $4,675,000 it will receive . . . The administrator's office will get $2,367,000, a small increase here, too . . . The Office of Education will get $1,975,600 for salaries, with $522,300 earmarked for the Division of Vocational Education . . . The Public Health Service was given increases up and down the line. It will add a number of new people. One of its few activities cutback was the Federal worker health program. Only $167,000 was allowed for it.

ELECTION: John L. Shaffer has been elected employe member of Agriculture's Efficiency Rating Board of Review . . . Harry Irion has been elected alternate.

SEC: Edmund M. Hanrahan yesterday was reelected chairman of the Securities & Exchange Commission. He first became a commissioner on July 22, 1946 . . . Edward F. Seiller, Kentucky State treasurer, has support to be an SEC member.

NSRB: Charles Kendall yesterday was appointed general counsel of the National Security Resources Board. It was the first major agency appointment made by John Steelman. Perhaps NSRB is about ready to get down to business.

PEOPLE: George L. Bell has resigned as director of Commerce's Office of International Trade . . . Dr. Katharine Way of the Oak Ridge Laboratory, has joined the staff of the Bureau of Standards here . . . Sarah E. Campbell has retired from Public Buildings after 31 years of service.

Union, CTC Split on How To Arbitrate Differences

Negotiators Call Meeting on Monday To Try to End Their Stalemate

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Settlement of the 1948 contract dispute between Capital Transit and its 4300 AFL operators and maintenance men yesterday hinged on finding a mutually agreeable method of arbitration.

Unless agreement is reached, there is a possibility the employes will strike July 1, when the present work contract expires.

A meeting has been called for 2 p. m. Monday to seek a way out of the stalemate.

The company has proposed a five-man arbitration board, three of them "impartial local citizens." The union—Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America—has proposed a three-man arbitration board, one of them an impartial chairman.

A statement by the company said the method proposed by it would deal with the "differences", between management and union. A union spokesman retorted that the company is willing to arbitrate only the wage issue in a limited manner. The union says it wants to arbitrate all issues, including the complete original wage issue.

The operators and maintenance men who get, respectively, $1.45 and $1.58 an hour top pay, have asked 25 cents more an hour, plus fringe benefits the company says would amount to an additional 9 cents an hour.

The company's original offer was to continue the present wage contract, but makes changes in operations that would save $500,000.

During seven weeks of discussions, negotiators for the union, according to the company, got down to a straight 10-cents-an-hour demand; whereas the company, according to union sources, offered to pay 5 cents an hour more if the $500,000 in economies were put into effect.

Carpenters Sign With Four More Builders

AFL carpenters announced yesterday they had signed four more contracts providing them with a 10-cent-an-hour increase in pay, as their strike against the area construction industry marked its twenty-fourth day.

B. B. Blackburn, secretary-treasurer of the Carpenters District Council, said that the new agreements had been reached with Howard Homes, Inc., presently building single-family homes in the Northeast section; Robert O. Scholz Co., constructing a downtown office building; and two concrete subcontractors, S. D. Moses and E. P. Knollman.

Striking AFL building laborers, who walked out one day after the carpenters, also signed up with Moses, a major subcontractor, for 15 cents an hour increase in pay. Leo Nazdin, president of the Building Laborers Council, said yesterday that like the carpenters, his union had been signing with a number of independent builders. He asserted that 40 per cent of the 3500 laborers on strike would be working on new contract jobs by next week.

The carpenters disclosed yesterday that 1400 union members collected their strike benefits on Thursday. The strikers get $3 a day, at a maximum of $15 a week, for each day they register at union headquarters as being out of work. The figures indicate, the union said, that the bulk of the 3500 AFL carpenters are at work on other jobs here.

AB&W Firm Tells Tuck Arbitration 'Impossible'

The AB&W Transit Co., operating between nearby Virginia and Washington, yesterday notified Governor William Tuck it was "impossible" for the company to arbitrate its dispute with its AFL workers.

The union, Division 1131 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, officially has advised the Governor, under the State laws, that it plans to strike July 21 unless its demand for higher wages is met by the bus firm.

B. C. May, general manager of the company, told the Governor, however, the company is willing to continue negotiations diirectly with the union and a representative of the Government.

The union is seeking an increase of 30 cents an hour for bus operators and maintenance workers, a pension and other benefits.

2-Year-Old Scalded Fatally in Bathtub

A 2-year-old child died at Children's Hospital last night at 11 p. m., her body 45 per cent scalded from boiling water.

Police reported the child, Martha P. Muldoon of 4020 8th st. se., turned hot water on herself in the family bathtub. A maid caring for her at the time had the child rushed to the hospital. The accident occured about 6:30 p m.

Five Graduates of School for Blind Get Feel Of Capital in 'Hand-Seeing' Tour of Shrines

The Washington Post

By John London
Post Reporter

Three young men and two girls got the feel of Washington yesterday in a 'hand-seeing" tour of the Capital's shrines.

Blind, some since birth, some as a result of childhood accidents, the five graduates of the New York State School for the Blind in Batavia saw in their mind's eye sights like the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, their hypersensitive fingers tracing the rectangular shape, the raised pilasters, the smoothness of the veined marble and the terse block-letter inscription:

H-E-R-E R-E-S-T-S I-N H-O-N-O-R-E-D G-L-O-R-Y A-N A-M-E-R-I-C-A-N S-O-L-D-I-E-R K-N-O-W-N B-U-T T-O G-O-D.

A soldier on duty had lifted a guard-chain that these young blind might see in their own way and they were grateful.

To Albert Bernardin, 19-year-old pianist and organist, almost totally blinded by a fall at the age of 15 months, this was "Breath-taking . . . a shrine for all to come and see . . . It was wise of Congress to do this thing."

Then, at the Lincoln Memorial, Daniel Lazich, 21, who in lighter moments plays the saxophone, by ear, and Peter Powenski, 19, a trained piano tuner, agreed with the sensitive Bernardin that "Here you feel significance—too bad there is so much vastness that we can't grasp it."

But Jean Thompson, 21, was most impressed by Mount Vernon—"the four-poster bed with the canopy, the simple lines of the chairs, the kind of furniture I'd like to have in my home, when I have a home, some day."

Later, at the Zero Milestone in the Ellipse, they all ran their hands over the copper compass, their ears picking out the crack of nearby baseball bats, the whirr of buses and friction of wheels on tar, while Joan Bowen, 17, chatted with a reporter.

She said she was blinded at the age of 4, the aftermath of scarlet fever.

"I only remember what it was like to see in a vague, hazy way," she wistfully observed. "Running and playing with all the other kids, that I remember. But trees and colors—I guess blue is a pretty color, isn't it?"

Last night they took a boat ride to Norfolk, then to Williamsburg. They hope to tour Skyline Drive, interview Vice President Barkley and Drew Pearson by Tuesday night.

Then the piano player who can't find a job and the piano tuner will start work temporarily in a cannery; the others aren't sure yet about the immediate future.

Their trip was partly sponsored by the school and partly sponsored by the Lions Clubs of their respective cities. They are being escorted by two teachers, Mike Goldberg, physical education instructor and Mrs. M. C. Ferguson, social studies and English instructor.

Senate Group Votes Today On Slum Bill

In the face of repeated House rebukes, a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee is slated to act today on a proposal to grant 20 million dollars this year for the 10-year District slum clearance program.

The House voted Thursday for the third consecutive year to deny any funds to carry out the 1946 District Redevelopment Act. The House turned down a recent request for $2,180,000 to start clearing the Marshall Heights area in Southeast Washington, the only city-approved project under the program.

The Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Independent Offices, headed by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), decided yesterday to consider an amendment to appropriate the act's full 20 million dollars authorization in lump sum this year.

The amendment is sponsored by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) who wrote the ill-fated Redevelopment Act three years ago.

In urging the full outlay now, McCarran has repeatedly pointed out to Congress that such a move would clear legislators from passing on the arguments of each specific redeveloonment project, a decision which the law delegates to the Commissioners and local planning agencies.

The House Appropriations Committee denied the Marshall Heights money this week chiefly because the group was given conflicting testimony by residents for and against the project.

'Too Many Fences'

Waiter Ends Life; Sought 'Free Spirit'

Fences no longer confine the spirit of Frank Giussani.

Giussani, 59, was found yesterday morning slumped in his car in the 400 block of New York ave. nw., dead of carbon monoxide poisoning.

A burned-out cigarette dangled between two fingers. On the seat beside the dead man was a half-filled bottle of cognac. In the car were three suicide notes.

One said:

"My spirit will be free to act as he likes. I like to be free. Too many fences govern our life in this world."

Two of the notes were addressed to Giussani's wife, the third to police. One note was dated January 26, 1949. A notation at the bottom said, "Confirmed June 21."

In the note to police, Giussani asked that his body be turned over to a school of surgery. It also specified "no funeral and no regrets." Giussani, an unemployed waiter who at one time worked at the Shoreham Hotel, lived at 301 34th st. ne.

His body was discovered at about 7:30 a. m. by a motorcycle policeman, Pvt. William Hopkins.

The windows of the car were closed and a piece of garden hose led from the exhaust pipe through a hole in the trunk compartment into the back seat.

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, who issued a certificate of suicide, said the man had apparently been dead for several hours. Giussani's wife, Justine, was notified later when she returned home from Norfolk, where she had been visiting relatives.

Judge Rejects Plea of Youth To Join Dad in Missouri Jail

John Chisolm's body will belong to the District Department of Corrections for some months to come—but his heart belongs to daddy.

Chisolm, 20, was sentenced to serve from one to three years for housebreaking and larceny by Judge Richmond B. Keech in District Court yesterday.

Chisolm's attorney, William W. Pavis, made a special appeal, asking if Chisolm could serve his sentence in Springfield, Mo., because his father is serving a sentence there. The attorney said Chisolm hasn't seen his father for many years and thought it would be nice if they could be together again.

Judge Keech said he couldn't oblige. Chisolm probably will be sent to the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va.

Last June 16, Chisolm, who formerly lived at 44 Blackmans ct. nw., pleaded guilty to stealing articles valued at $30 on May 10 from the room of Hugh Liang in the Franklin Park Hotel, 1332 I st. nw.

Navy Refutes Rumor Series At Lab Fire

A three-alarm fire swept part of a warehouse at the highly secret Naval Research Laboratory in Anacostia early yesterday and left in its wake a series of rumors.

All of these rumors were dispelled yesterday afternoon at a press conference at the research laboratory, at which Capt. Morton K. Fleming, acting director, presided.

Captain Fleming said there was no classified material in the area of the fire and escorted reporters and photographers on a tour of Supply Warehouse Building No. 13, where the blaze occurred.

The press had been barred from the scene earlier when the fire was raging. This, Captain Fleming said, was for "security reasons."

Captain Fleming estimated the damage would range between $50,000 and $80,000, depending on what can be salvaged.

The nonclassified equipment destroyed included insulating material, electric motors, transformers, switches and fluorescent tubes.

Although the warehouse is 600 feet long, the fire did not spread beyond an area of about 25 by 30 feet.

Warehouse Damaged

Captain Fleming said the warehouse suffered damage and it may be necessary to replace girders and part of the collapsed concrete roof. The heat weakened the cross beams, he said, so that they buckled under the weight of the roof, causing part of it to collapse.

The fire was discovered by Philip L. Linthicum, a civilian guard, at 2:33 a. m. Naval firefighting equipment nearby was rushed to the warehouse and a call for additional apparatus was sent to the Naval Air Station. The District Fire Department received an alarm at 2:43 a. m. There was a second alarm at 2:56 a. m. and a third alarm at 3:06 a. m.

The District Fire Department sent 24 engine companies, four truck companies, a rescue squad, an ambulance and a fire boat to the scene. Directing operations was Acting Chief Joseph Mayhew, who has been nominated by the Commissioners to succeed retiring Chief Clement Murphy. Deputy Chief Joseph W. Kay also was at the scene.

The barring of newspaper reporters from the research laboratory grounds during the fire contributed to the confusion that pyramided yesterday.

Captain Fleming said the research laboratory had received telephone calls from high officials in nearly all of the various Government agencies, among them the Atomic Energy Commission, seeking information as to what exactly had happened.

He told reporters there was nothing about the fire to suggest sabotage but that the possibility will not be overlooked by a special three-man board of inquiry that is investigating the blaze.

Tug and Cabin Cruiser Collide; Two Are Injured

Two passengers of a cabin cruiser were cut with flying glass last night when their vessel collided with the tugboat Virginia, towing four empty barges in the Potomac River off Bellevue, D. C.

George C. Hohmann, 2614 L st. nw., was cut on both arms and Mrs. Margaret K. Donbroskey of Clinton, Md., was cut on the thigh and left leg. Both refused hospital treatment.

Harbor police reported the cabin cruiser, the Rambler, owned by the Baltimore Construction Co., was being operated by Chester W. Matthews, superintendent of teh company, who lives aboard the craft. The tugboat was under the command of Lewis Morgan, 314 9th st. ne. It was bound downstream.

Relief Check Delay Facing 10,000 Here

Pay Won't Be Ready Until July 11 Even If Truman Signs Bill For Funds on Monday

Between 10,000 and 11,000 men, women and children dependent on public assistance are faced with 10 days to two weeks delay in receiving their July 1 subsistence checks, Public Welfare Director John W. Tramburg said yesterday.

The delay stems from the fact that the District's 1950 fiscal year appropriation bill was just passed yesterday, and it will take two weeks from the time the President signs it until assistance checks are ready, Tramburg explained.

If the President should sign the bill on Monday, payments would not be ready until about July 11. Persons drawing general assistance, old age assistance, and aid for children and the blind usually receive such checks the first or second of the month.

The Board of Public Welfare discussed the situation at yesterday's meeting. Officials were concerned about the delay but could not do anything about it, Tramburg said.

The Welfare Board decided yesterday to increase the fees charged by the six child day care centers by 50 cents a week per family, and also to increase total attendance allowed by about 30, to a total of 300.

These changes, and a change in regulations authorizing the use income from fees for administration, will provide sufficient funds to continue operation of the six centers. Without the new fees and other changes, it would have been necessary to close at least two of the centers, due to lack of funds, the director said.

The board approved 19 adoptions of children, and discharged nine children from guardianship as they are gainfully employed and no longer require aid.

The board also approved:

Release of case information to the probation officers of the District and Municipal courts, to the Army and Navy Relief Societies, and to National Capital Housing Authority.

As child placing agencies: Catholic Charities, Methodist Conference (renewals) and the Lutheran Inter-Mission Society.

D. C. Children To Be Treated With Fluoride

Free fluoride treatments to prevent tooth decay will be made available this summer to all District children of preschool age, it was announced yesterday.

The ambitious program will begin at two special clinics, Tuesday, said Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, director of the District Health Department's Bureau of Dental Health.

Already nearly 700 children are listed to receive the topical applications of fluoride, according to Mrs. Harold Kessling, who is serving as the dental service representative of the Congress of Parent and Teacher Organizations.

One fluoride clinic to serve white children has been set up at the Thompson School, 12th and L sts. nw. (Na. 6000, extension 2424), and another clinic, for Negro children, will operate at the Grimke School, Vermont ave. and T st. nw. (NA. 6000, extension 2417). Parents who wish appointments for their children may make them directly by calling the above number.

Parents may also arrange for the appointments through health chairmen of their local P-TA or similar organizations, Dr. Ostrow explained.

Four clinic visits will be necessary for each child.

Death of Man, 34, Reported Due to Sleeping Drug

William H. Williams, 34, of 4304 Fessenden st. nw., died at George Washington Hospital yesterday of what, police said, was an overdose of a sleeping drug.

He had been found unconscious in his room at the Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium, where he was employed as an attendant, about 6 a. m. Wednesday. A note in the room stated Williams had taken 30 grains of a sleeping powder.

A death certificate was held up pending a chemical analysis by the coroner's office.

Civic Unit Hits Renaming 2 to School Board

Mrs. Magdeburger Assailed Over Joke; Lee Also Opposed

The Federation of Civic Associations last night unanimously approved a motion opposing reappointment of Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger and Adelbert W. Lee to the Board of Education.

The federation went on record for the reappointment of George E. C. Hayes, one of the three Negro members of the board.

The group adopted a report by its education committee which charged Mrs. Magdeburger with telling a "colored joke" at recent Anacostia High School commencement exercises.

The committee report said this incident "very properly reflects the general thinking" of Mrs. Magdeburger.

Along with Lee and Hayes, Mrs. Magdeburger comes up for reappointment by District Court on July 1.

At last night's meeting in the District Building, the education committee declared it is unable to recall that Lee has ever supported any of the federation's policies.

This, it was learned, was the story told by Mrs. Magdeburger which the federation found objectionable:

"Whatcha dreamin' about?" inquired one.

"I'm dreamin' myself a million dollars," was the reply.

"And how's about lendin' me one o' them dollars?"

"Nothin' doin', you lazy nigger, you dream your own million dollars."

Mrs. Magdeburger said she told the story while talking about wishful thinking on the part of high school graduates.

"I think it's really a very ridiculous thing," she said. "I didn't intend to insult anyone or hurt anyone's feelings. I never dreamed a harmless joke would have these far-reaching effects."

Lee could not be reached for comment.

In opposing reappointment of Mrs. Magdeburger who is president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Lee, the civic organization urged naming of persons "who will serve the wishes of all citizens of the District alike."

In other business, at the last meeting until autumn, the federation:

Asked its recreation committee to confer with Police Inspector Robert C. Pearce as to the status of Negro officers who wish to play baseball on the department's team. Maj. Robert J. Barrett wrote the body that Inspector Pearce would hear them.

Voted 17 to 16 that the District Recreation Board should not hire public school teachers for its summer playground program if other qualified persons are available.

Agreed to petition the recreation board to find swimming facilities for Negro children living in Southwest Washington. Use of Anacostia swimming pool was urged last night as a means of preventing drownings in the Anacostia or Potomac Rivers.

Grandmother, Aunt File Suit For Right to Visit Girl, 6

The aged grandmother and an aunt of a 6-year-old girl, whose parents are dead, yesterday asked District Court to order that the child be allowed to visit them during her summer vacations from school.

The suit was filed by Mrs. Elizabeth J. Sedano, 74, and her daughter, Elano V. Sedano, both of Rockaway, N. J., against Mrs. Frieda Kelleher, wife of a Metropolitan police lieutenant.

Mrs. Kelleher was named testamentary guardian of Marie Elizabeth Sedano by the child's mother before her death in Florida in February, 1948, according to the suit. The father died in Florida in 1942.

The suit charges that before the death of her parents, Marie visited frequently in Rockaway. Now, however, Mrs. Kelleher, who lives at 3100 Connecticutt ave. nw., won't allow her to visit the grandmother although she may visit the aunt anywhere, the suit adds. Since the plaintiffs share a home, all visits by the child are therefore eliminated.

Mrs. Kelleher has stated that it was the expressed wish of the mother that the child should not visit the grandmother, according to the suit. Mrs. Sedano was told by Mrs. Kelleher, however, that she can visit Marie in Washington, but her advanced age makes such trips impossible, the suit charges.

District Fund Bill Passed With Cut of $387,702

Senate, House Vote $102,754,447 For New Fiscal Year as Fixed in Committee

Congress gave final approval yesterday to a $102,754,447 District appropriation bill for the fiscal year starting next Friday. It now goes to the White House.

The measure was cleared by both Houses in the form fixed by a joint congressional conference committee which cut the bill $387,702 below the amount recommended by the Senate.

Biggest final slice taken from the bill was $225,000 to build an addition to the Bell Vocational School. Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) said if the Commissioners favor the Bell project it might be included in a later deficiency appropriations bill."

District officials said yesterday the Commissioners favor such a move.

Bates, Hill Steer Bill

Final city budget for the coming year would be made some 10 or 11 million dollars higher than the amount in the bill by congressional approval of $330 retroactive city employe pay raises and other pending legislation.

Representative Bates steered the measure to final approval in the House, and Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.) did it in the Senate. They head the District Appropriations Subcommittees.

In its final form, the budget bill charts the biggest one-year expense allowance for the District in the city's history. Major last-minute cuts took $37,000, for operation of the Langston Recreation Building, out of recreation funds; $25,000 out of police funds, and $34,610 out of school, funds besides the removal of money for the Bell addition.

Senate increases for welfare, sewer construction, and all but $11,824 in the increase for the Health Department were approved in the final bill.

Major appropriations contained in the final bill include: schools, $23,270,710; police, $6,453,989; Fire Department, $3,751,242; Health Department, $10,842,477; Welfare Department, $14,084,341, and Public Works Department, including streets, sewers, water, sanitation, and other agencies, $23,518,150.

Supply Bill Passed

In another action yesterday, the Senate passed and sent to the White House a two-billion-dollar Labor-Federal Security supply bill with more than 57 million for Federal health and educational institutions in the District area.

The National Cancer Institute at Bethesda was granted the largest item—$18,900,000 in cash and $6,000,000 in contract authority. A portion of the sum is for starting the health center there.

After disagreement between the House and Senate, the National Institute for Dental Research was voted $100,000 in preliminary planning funds for its proposed center. The Senate had attempted to allow $2,000,000 for actual construction and equipment.

Other funds approved for local institutions included: $8,054,425 for Howard University expansion, including a law school building, auditorium, biology, dental school and engineering administration buildings and new men's and women's dormitories; $5,438,000 for St. Elizabeths Hospital to cover operating expenses, and construction of an infirmary and a storeroom; $2,443,000 for Freedmen's Hospital and $315,000 for the Columbia Institution for the Deaf.

Boat Delay Cancels Ortega Lecture Here

Senor Jose Ortega y Gasset will be unable to keep a speaking engagement at the National Gallery of Art Sunday, because of delay in the arrival of his ship from Europe, he radioed gallery officials yesterday.

The famed Spanish philosopher is en route to the Goethe festival starting Monday in Colorado.

Area News in Brief

Juke Boxes to Carry Record on VD Now

District juke boxes may join sulfa, penicillin and other weapons of the local health department's armentarium against venereal disease, it was disclosed yesterday.

That is, the Health Department has made a record in its all-out campagin against syphilis, gonorrhea and other catchy diseases. And it wants that record played in bar-rooms, dance halls and other spots where catchy music it appreciated.

All was revealed yesterday in explanation of a $100 item recently authorized by the District Commissioners for VD campaign purposes. One half of the C-Note, it was explained, is to pay Mrs. Betty Bullock Murphy, songwriter, of 3800 New Hampshire ave. nw., for making up the song entitled "Put It Down." The other half is for its orchestration and vocals by a Negro quintet.

"It" in the song title is VD in any form, and, as the song expresses it, "the time has come to put old VD down." The tune and lyrics, a health department spokesman said, "are not highbrow, just bar-room educational stuff—but in good taste."

Judge Grants Request

When Charles Yokley of Germantown, Md., was sentenced to serve 10 years in the Maryland Penitentiary yesterday he asked the judge to send him to the Maryland House of Correction instead.

"I spent a year at the House of Correction before," Yokley told Judge Stedman Prescott, "and I have a good rating and know people there." Judge Prescott granted the request.

Yokley was convicted of manslaughter after pleading guilty to the fatal stabbing of his brother-in-law, James Lowe, 26, also of Germantown.

Barrett Takes Holiday

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, is taking a brief holiday. He went on annual leave Thursday, will return to his post Monday.

Union Favors Mayhew

The Washington firemen's union yesterday issued a statement approving the appointment of Deputy Chief J. A. Mayhew as chief engineer of the local Fire Department upon retirement of Chief Clement Murphy.

Local 36, International Association of Firefighters, AFL, praised the Commissioners for appointing the senior man to the post and termed Chief Mayhew qualified.

The union also urged the promotion to deputy chief of Ranking Battalion Chief Millard H. Sutton.

9 Families Sign Covenant to Bar S.E. Liquor Store

Nine families in Southeast Washington yesterday asked District Court to prevent a liquor store from operating on a lot adjacent to their property.

The nine families and the owners of the lot, located at 4413 Bowen rd. se., signed a covenant in January, 1924, that there would be no "spirituous or malt liquors made, sold or kept for sale" on any of the premises, according to the suit.

Named defendants are Gorman's Inc., of 3916 S. Capitol st., who have applied for a license to sell whisky at the Bowen rd. address, and Wallace and Margaret Rollins of District Heights, Md., owners of the lot.

An Alcoholic Beverage Control Board hearing on the license application is scheduled for Tuesday, according to Nathan Lubar, lawyer for the plaintiffs.

Mrs. Ida Shirk, Genealogist, Dies Here at 89

Mrs. Ida M. Shirk, 89, genealogist, world traveler and wife of the late Albert Wright Shirk, died Thursday at her suite in the Wardman Park Hotel after an illness of six weeks.

Mrs. Shirk

A descendant of the Talbott family of Maryland's Eastern Shore, Mrs. Shirk helped compile a genealogy of that family published in 1927. She had done genealogical work for nearly half a century.

Born in Indianapolis, she was educated in private schools there and in Europe. A skilled horsewoman in her youth, she spent much of her later life traveling.

Mrs. Shirk was married in 1880 to Albert Wright Shirk, Indianapolis banker. He died in 1918. A resident of Florence, Italy, from 1914 to 1924, she was active in the Christian Science movement there. Although maintaining a permanent residence in Indianapolis throughout her life, she had lived in Washington since the war.

Mrs. Shirk was active in the Daughters of the American Revolution, Order of the Crown, Ladies of the Garter, Runnemede, Daughters of the Colonies, and the Maryland Historical Society. She is survived by a brother, Frank Murphy of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Funeral services will be held at Gawler funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw., at 11 a. m. today. Burial will be in Indianapolis.

Major General Peyton, 68, Dies After Heart Attack

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Peyton, United States Army (ret.), 68, former commander of the Army War College here, died yesterday of a heart attack suffered while motoring near Indian Head, Md.

Gen. Peyton

General Peyton died in a Navy ambulance which was bringing him to Walter Reed Hospital after he was stricken. His wife, Mrs. Sybil F. Peyton, was with him.

He had retired in 1942 because of ill health, after 38 years of active service in the Army. General and Mrs. Peyton had lived since then on a farm estate in Earlysville, near Charlottesville, Va.

His last command was that of the First Army Corps, with headquarters at Columbia, S. C.

A 1901 graduate of Virginia Military Institute, General Peyton was a roommate of Gen. George C. Marshall during his four years there.

A native of Nashville, he became a second lieutenant of infantry on June 11, 1904, and remained continuously on active duty until February 28, 1942, when he retired. He served overseas in World War I, with the Sixth, Sixtieth and Sixty-first Infantry.

He received the Distinguished Service Medal and the Silver Star decorations for that service.

He was graduated from the Army War College here in 1931, and assigned to Fort Meade, Md., later serving with the War Department General Staff here from 1932 to 1936.

He became commandant of the War College here in December, 1939, serving there until July, 1940, when he assumed command of the Eighth Division at Camp Jackson, S. C., followed by command of the First Army Corps.

General and Mrs. Peyton had no children. Besdes his wife, he is survived by a sister and two brothers.

THE AMAZING STORY OF LARRY DOBY

BY SHIRLEY POVICH

Early this season it looked as though Cleveland's 1948 pennant-winners were "cheese champs"—but it's a different story now! The Indians are climbing fast, thanks in great part to Larry Doby, who's blasting homers out of the park all over the American League.

With Doby and his team in town this weekend Povich brings you a brilliant profile of this powerful southpaw slugger. Can Doby be compared with Babe Ruth? What have been the highlights of his career—before and since getting into the majors? Do his teammates like him?

Washington's No. 1 sportswriter has the answer for you in this special feature. Enjoy it tomorrow in Sunday's Post.

Britain's Other Princess

Vivacious, 19-year-old Princess Margaret has stepped out of her sister's shadow, into England's heart. But the life of royalty has its drawbacks—especially for this lively girl. PARADE brings you Margaret's life in pictures, graphically showing how she has changed from a child into a poised young woman.

Arlington Aids Its Problem Children

Play therapy is the order of the day for troublesome tots brought into Arlington's Mental Health Clinic. Psychiatrists there learn things from the way a child handles blocks, fires a toy pistol or models clay. Post reporter Don Olesen tells the story with pictures tomorrow in Section II.

3 Girl Grads from B-CC High Plan Three Different Careers

Bethesda-Chevy Chase days are behind—now it's college for one, a job for another, marriage for the third. Sonia Stein interviews all three girls for the story of their futures. Peggy Preston, in a separate article, tells how they've solved their fashion and beauty problems. Good reading for everyone this Sunday in Section IV.

News Review by Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

A new Sunday column of commentary by one of the most alert minds of our day! Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.—noted Harvard historian, author of the Pulitzer Prize-winning book, "The Age of Jackson;" regular contributor to Life, Fortune, and the Atlantic Monthly—now reviews the events of the week for you every Sunday in Section II. His first column appears tomorrow.

Bright Satins, Brocades Add Color to Thai Party

By Marie McNair

ORIENTAL figures in bright satins and brocades added pictorially to the garden party scene at the Thai Embassy yesterday.

The little ladies from Siam—it's only recently been changed back to Thai—were like figurines in their prettiest tunics, some gold-banded, others silver-edged, all with hip length jackets and slim skirts almost to the floor.

The reception celebrated Thailand's National Day. The Ambassador, His Royal Highness Wan Waithayakon, was host, with Princess Wan in royal purple threaded in gold with him to welcome the guests. Grateful for a breeze which fanned through the trees, diplomats and dignitaries gathered at small tables set out on the lawn, to sip drinks and sample the lobster salad, cold salmon, curried chicken and rice, and to top it off with a raspberry sherbet.

Harry Andrews, Ambassador of South Africa, stopped for a chat with Mr. and Mrs. Eldon P. King, and the Wilfred Wittemores. Mrs. Andrews looking ever so smart in black silk with a smoke white beret trimmed in black, sat under the trees with Madame Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador.

Some Early Arrivals

The Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Panyushkin, came along. So did, the Nicaraguan Ambassador, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa. Early arrivals were the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong, and Mrs. James E. Webb, wife of the Undersecretary of State.

Garden party frocks were worn by Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, in cocoa nylon net, and Mrs. George Neilson, whose sheer black frock was topped by a white straw cartwheel laden with the biggest red poppies I've ever seen.

General Raymond Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler were there, and I saw the Ceylonese Ambassador and Mrs. Corea in a handsome magenta costume; the Pakistan Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani, the Iraq Ambassador, Abdullah Bakr.

The Indian Minister, B. R. Sen, said that the Indian Ambassador, Mme. Pandit was in New York to make not one — but several speeches; the Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco van Kleffens exchanged pleasantries with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman.

Everybody talked about Washington weather, and the fascinating young daughter of the house, standing with a younger cousin at the doorway to say "how-do-you-do."

Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, wife of the justice, had expected her husband to accompany her until a last minute telephone message said that work at the court would delay his arrival home.

Ogunquitt Calls Wileys

When the Supreme Court, tentatively set to close next week, does adjourn, Justice and Mrs. Wiley will be off to Ogunquitt, Me., to the same cottage they've had for several seasons. During the summer they expect to have their son and daughter-in-law up for weekends from New Haven.

Stopped to say "hello" to Ray Muir, of the State Department; and Anis Azer, Egyptian Minister. The Walter Wilds, Mr. and Mrs. James Souby, Mrs. Leon Tashof, were there and through the gathering I could see the faces of the Charge d'Affaires of Spain, German Baraibar, Admiral Harold Baker, and Mrs. Baker wearing a flaring black hat with pink birds poised in flight. Saw Capt. Valentine Pottle, but not Mrs. Pottle; Col. and Mrs. Consuelo Seoane at a table for two; tall ruddy cheeked Sir Derick Hoyer Millar, British Minister; the Irish Minister, Sean Nunan, and Walter Butterworth of the State Department, with Mrs. Butterworth in navy blue and a brimmed hat of natural straw.

Others there were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Thorp, Mrs. Carmen Cerecedo and her sister, Mrs. Frank Buckley, with her tall son, Frank; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Miss Margaret Elizabeth O'Brien, and Alfred Lilienthal introducing a pretty young cousin, Miss Cohn, from Wellesley, who's spending six weeks studying the National Labor Relations Board.

Miss Goodrich, Fiance Honored at Dinner

MISS MARY ALICE GOODRICH and Benjamin F. Houston, jr., whose marriage will take place today, were honored last evening at a dinner party following rehearsal at St. Albans Church. The host and hostess were the bride's uncle and aunt, Judge and Mrs. Herbert Funk Goodrich of Philadelphia.

Guests included members of the wedding party as well as Mrs. Lee T. Stull, Mrs. Edmund C. Houston, Miss Nancy Needham, Mrs. Munro Magruder, Hunter Surratt, Patrick Welch, Canon and Mrs. Albert Lucas, and the families of the bride and bridegroom.

Miss Dickey, Mr. Crossfield Feted at Supper Party

MISS LELIA DICKEY and her fiance, Charles Claude Crossfield 3d, were honored last evening at a buffet supper party given by Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, jr., at their home in Rockville.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Noyes of New York, Mrs. Newbold Noyes, mother of the bride-elect, and the bride-elect's brothers, Robert Noyes and Peter Noyes. Also, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Finkenstaedt, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Douglas, Miss Nancy Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. James Clarke, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Brewster Chapman, jr.

Mrs. Croghan Entertains For Miss Gaillard

A KITCHEN shower was given yesterday for Miss Monica Gaillard, bride-elect of F. Taylor Peck. The hostess was Mrs. John Alvin Croghan, cousin of Miss Gaillard.

Among the guests in the 4 to 6 gathering were Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, mother of the bride; Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Miss Hope Erwin, Mrs. Frederic Burton Krafft of Hopewell, N. J., Mrs. Joseph Dear, Miss Ann Muse Gillespie and Miss Betty Jo Manfuso.

The wedding of Miss Gaillard and Mr. Peck will take place Friday, July 1, in St. John's Church.

Harrisons Entertain For Daughter, Fiance

MR. AND MR. LELAND HARRISON entertained at dinner last evening at the 1925 F Street Club for their daughter, Miss Helen Harrison and Lieut. Neil Ayer, USA, whose marriage will take place today. Guests included members of the wedding party, the two families and out-of-town guests here for the wedding.

Lloyds Present Daughter At Gibson Island Tea

MR. AND MRS. HUMPHREY LLOYD presented their daughter, Miss Janeth Lloyd, to their friends from Baltimore and Gibson Island, Md., at a tea dance yesterday at the Gibson Island Club. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd are summer residents of Gibson Island.

Miss Lloyd's Washington debut will be a dance on December 21.

Mrs. Mesta Honored At Luxembourg Dinner

MRS. GEORGE MESTA, Minister, designate to Luxembourg, was the guest of honor at a dinner given last evening at the Luxembourg Legation by the Minister and Mme. Le Gallais.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson were guests, as well as the Ambassador of Belgium, Baron Silvercruys. Others were the Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani, Attorney General and Mrs. Tom Clark, Senator Theodore Francis Green, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Rusk, Chief of Protocol, Stanley Woodward the Secretary to the President and Mrs. Charles G. Ross, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Edward Nash and Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim.

Purcells Will Motor To Quebec Today

Prof. and Mrs. Richard J. Purcell will leave today with their two children to motor to Quebec. Their son, Richard F. Purcell and their daughter, Patricia Eileen Purcell, who is president of Phi Mu Sorority at George Washington University, will sail from Quebec on the Volendam on June 30. They will attend the summer session at the University of Fribourg, Switzerland, and tour western Europe before returning home.

Upon his return, Richard will study law at Harvard University. He received his M. A. degree in Government from Columbia University in February.

Mrs. Lambert Renamed DAR Chapter Regent

Mrs. Virginia Heckert Lambert was reelected regent of the Frances Scott Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at a recent meeting.

BEN ROSE, Chicago designer of decorative fabrics, shows Miss Elinor Hillyer, of Madamoiselle Magazine, one of the modern drapery fabrics he designs. Miss Hillyer and Mr. Rose were photographed at the Washington Fashion Group luncheon here this week, where he was awarded a citation by the Institute of Contemporary Arts for his development of contemporary textiles

Jerry-Built Cracker Boxes, Tiny Rooms Plague Decorators

By Lucia Brown

"THE ROOMS are so small! What the heck can I do with them?"

That is the question thousands of Americans nowadays are asking interior decorators, homemaking writers—and themselves—according to Miss Elinor Hillyer, Design-for-Living editor of Mademoiselle Magazine.

"Crackerbox" houses tossed up during the recent building boom have brought this problem to the fore, says Miss Hillyer. Here's the way she describes them:

"Such a house is usally called, by courtesy, a 'Cape Codder,'" she says. "The bedrooms are as big as a minute, the living room as big as a minute-and-a-half.

"The bedroom is just large enough for a double bed, but you have to walk sideways to get around that. The living room has a picture or corner window but not enough unobstructed wall space to install a sofa, much less a couple of end tables."

All this is bound to influence furniture making and interior planning, she said. Pin-up lamps have to be used instead of floor lamps, smaller furniture is in order, and cabinets that keep clutter to a minimum. It's an influence that you'll notice this fall if you go furniture shopping, she said, and it will be increasingly apparent as time goes on.

Ben Rose, Chicago fabric designer who was cited for his textile work this week by the Washington Institute of Contemporary Arts, agrees with Miss Hillyer. (Both were speakers at the Washington Fashion Group luncheon here.) He believes that wallpaper and draperies must be of the type that increase the feeling of space in the compact houses now being built.

Smaller patterns, with a neat, all-over arrangement, will do this and he predicted that they will be increasingly used this fall. Muted, but clean-cut, colors that have the same effect will also be popular he believes. He said that blue, "a forgotten color in home decoration," would emerge more dominantly, largely as a result of the recent perfection of blue dyes.

Mr. Rose described draperies as "flexible murals" and walls as "flat murals." They simply act as a background, however, he said. They set the tone of the room, to the furniture toegther.

"Designs in draperies should 'flow'," he said "for you get the effect of the pattern as it hangs in folds. Abstract designs lend themselves to this much better than bold, definite ones. Such stark, splashy design is passing, anyway. It's 'old modern' now.

Incidentally, Mr. Ross says it's a mistake to think that modern design is popular mainly among younger persons. Many older people who have lived with the best of traditional choose modern when they re-decorate their homes, he said, because they have a basic appreciation of good things suited to their current way of life.

Making Your Own Travel Books

If you or your youngsters are National Geographic readers and like to go back to your favorite articles again and again, here's a suggestion that may interest you.

For years now, I have collected second-hand copies of the magazine, taken out the stories of distant peoples or of travel adventure I like best and have had them bound together. Small-boat trips around the world, for instance, have been especially interesting to me and I have a volume made up of accounts of such trips. The various articles that appear on natural history from time to time—birds, flowers, insects—also make up fine reference volumes. If one goes back far enough, a whole series of articles on Washington, D. C., can be bound together. These are but a few of the possibilities.

I like my home-made volumes bound permanently and have found that it dosen't cost too much to have them taken care of by one of the binderies that do work for the libraries. But the spring-back binders used to keep loose sheets together are very satisfactory, too.

It's a satisfying hobby, this making of your own travel books. Perhaps it could serve as a very good family project for you.

Language of Music Understood by All

Music promotes universal understanding. It's one subject no one can veto and almost anybody can learn, contends Miss Angela Diller, composer, lecturer and teacher of music.

Miss Diller came to Washington this week from New York to give a series of lectures and demonstrations on progressive music education at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw. The first of the sessions will be conducted today from 10 a. m. to noon, with a group of youngsters, 8 to 10 years of age, as students plus an equal number of mothers listening in.

Guest of honor at a reception last night given by the music committee of the YWCA, she discussed her trip to Europe last year.

While in Europe she lectured to groups of teachers in Lausanne, Amsterdam, Copenhagen and stockholm. Besides, she lectured in the conservatories of Zurich and Oslo as well as at the Royal Academy of Music in London. While visiting at Edvard Grieg's home in Bergen, Norway, she was permitted to play several selections on the great composer's own piano.

"I couldn't speak the languages of all the countries I visited," explains Miss Diller, "but I could understand the people and they could understand me through music."

From the countries she visited, the composer and teacher concludes that there is more current interest in music in the United States than in Europe. She cited the increasing number of school bands, symphony orchestras and mounting number of children studying music. "America's interest and participation in music is a significant trend," she says, adding, "taking part in music is a social art."

Contrary to popular belief, Miss Diller adheres to the theory that radio and phonograph music increases rather than decreases the number of music students.

Hostesses at last night's reception included Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, first vice president of the YWCA board; Mrs. John S. Burlew, chairman, and Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, honorary chairman of the music committee; Miss Mabel R. Cook, executive director of the YWCA; Mrs. Laura Pendleton MacCartney, music director, National Child Research Center; Mrs. W. L. McDaniel, program director, Friday morning Music Club; Miss Olga Bloecher, YWCA music director; Mrs. Hugh D. Farley and Mrs. Paul Wiers.

Texans to Start July 4 Weekend With Potomac Moonlight Cruise

By Nicha Soure

THE Texans have hit upon the right idea for starting the July 4th weekend—a moonlight cruise. Come Friday night, former residents of deep-in-the-heart-of State will gather at 7th st. wharves (7th st. and Maine ave. sw.) for a boat ride down the Potomac aboard the S. S. Bear Mountain showboat.

The boat will shove off at 8:30 p. m. for a three-hour cruise with entertainment, eating and dancing sandwiched in between. As a keynote to the attire, the society says that a number of special square dances will be thrown in for extra fun. Must be a gingham skirt, plaid shirt shindig.

For tickets contact Representative Tom Pickett, Room 418, House Office Building.

Mississippians Reelect Entire Officer Slate

Mississippians obviously were pleased with this year's slate of officers, for the entire slate was reelected to serve for the coming season.

Heading the list is Holden Rhymes who was elected to serve another term as president. Other Magnolia State officers are Col. John A. O'Keefe, first vice president; Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, second vice president; James A. Davis, third vice president, and Jack Beiser, fourth vice president.

Also Miss Susan P. Burrews, secretary; Jeff Busby, treasurer, and Mrs. Sue Fite Ramsey, historian.

Californians Elect Rep. Donald L. Jackson

Representative Donald L. Jackson, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and a Marine Corps major during World War II, was elected president of the California State Society.

The three members of the board of Governors, who were named at the recent annual meeting, are Miss M. S. Tisdale, Representative Leroy Johnson, who is the retiring California State Society president; and Representative Harry R. Sheppard.

The vice presidents of the society include John J. Allen jr., Newton B. Drury, Mrs. E. A. Evans, Dan A. Kimball, Arnold Kruckman, Mrs. Gertrude Scott, Mrs. Elizabeth Benson and Alexander von Hafften.

Other officers include Mrs. Clair Engle, secretary; Walter T. Phair, treasurer; and Mrs. Carl Wheat, historian.

At Least One Shortcoming To Be Remedied Tonight

Washington's one shortcoming in the eyes of Representative Charles P. Nelson, will be remedied tonight.

The Maine Congressman has tried unsuccessfully to find a real Maine baked bean supper served here. Tonight he, as well as other members of the Maine State Society, will have a chance to make up for the rest of the traditional Saturday night suppers they have missed at the Maine State Society picnic.

The picnic will be held from 3 p. m. to 9 p. m. at the Palisades Recreation Center at Dana st. and Sherrier pl. nw.

Ask Anne About Making A Sun Bonnet

Can you or one of your readers tell me where I can get hold of a pattern for an old-fashioned sun bonnet, the kind that gives ample shade to one's eyes, and which covers the back of one's neck? H. P. A.

I have not been able to find a sun bonnet pattern for an adult. However, if you are handy at such things you should have no difficulty in fashioning one for yourself by using one of the child's sun bonnet patterns which you will find in dress pattern books. Among the children's sun clothes or coats you will find sun bonnets which are pretty much the same as you describe with the exception of the piece to cover the back of the neck. To make the sun bonnet with this piece just extend the back piece of the bonnet. Gather it at the back of the neck by sewing a piece of bias tape to the wrong side and running a piece of narrow elastic through it. Fasten the elastic securely at each end. Follow the same general proportions of the brim in the child's pattern, making it enough larger to fit you. Before you cut the material, it would be a good idea to make the complete pattern of newspaper to be sure it fits.

How can I remove chewing gum from a black calfskin purse? I have picked most of the gum off, but there still remains a thin coating. V. M.

Sponge the spot with a soft cloth moistened with carbon tetrachloride. When clean, go over the purse with a good leather conditioner. In the future, to remove gum all in one piece, hold a piece of ice to it to make it hard.

New Potato Recipe

A new way to serve potatoes is to peel them and cut them into paper-thin slices, then overlap the slices in rows in a baking dish that has been lightly buttered. Brush the potatoes with melted butter, sprinkle lightly with salt and paprika and bake in a hot oven until the slices are a golden brown on top.

Airline Gets $8500 In Plane Collision

A District Court jury yesterday awarded Eastern Air Lines $8500 for damage to one of its planes in a midair collision with a Universal Airlines plane over Aberdeen, Md.

The collision was December 19, 1946, between an Eastern DC-4, carrying 56 passengers, and a Universal DC-3, with 21 passengers. No one was injured. The Universal plane landed safely at Phillips Army Air Field in Aberdeen, and the Eastern plane landed safely at National Airport here.

In another damage suit, Kenneth S. Baker, an oil company maintenance man of 106 Holly ave., Takoma Park, Md., was awarded $12,000 by a District Court jury before Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

Defendant in the suit was Henry A. Miller, president of the St. Clair Motor Co., Pittsburgh. Baker sued for injuries he received February 10, 1947, when the car he was driving and an auto, driven by Miller, collided at 3d st. and Missouri ave. nw.

Heeds priest's advice

Weirton, W. Va., June 24 (AP).—Mary Jane Gallagher withdrew from a beauty contest today rather than risk excommunication from the Catholic Church.

Mrs. J. E. Gallagher, Mary Jane's mother, said her daughter entered a regional elimination in the Miss West Virginia contest only because she thought Bishop John J. Swint of Wheeling had withdrawn his ban.

Bishop Swint excommunicated last year Mariruth Ford, daughter of a Wheeling merchant, when she disregarded a warning and won such a contest. Bishop Swint announced then he would excommunicate Catholic girls who participated in future contests, and perhaps their parents.

Harold Ford, Mariruth's father, said today his daughter had joined the Episcopal Church.

Mary Jane had been scheduled to appear in the regional contest Saturday night at Moundsville, W. Va. Winner of the State-wide competition represents West Virginia in the Miss America pageant at Atlantic City.

"Religion is more important than a beauty contest," Mrs. Gallagher said today in explaining her daughter's withdrawal.

Man Is Held In Assault on Deaf Woman

A one-legged man was held for grand jury action yesterday in Alexandria Police Court, charged with felonious assault Sunday on a deaf and dumb woman.

Defendent Albert Cowens, 49, of 5 Delaney's ct., Alexandria, pleaded innocent to the charge. He said Miss Fanchan Williams, 63, got the cut on her head in his room when she tripped over his wooden leg and struck her head on a wine bottle.

Efforts of police to find out what happened were complicated by the fact that Miss Williams is not only deaf and dumb—she can neither read nor write.

Detective Paul Smith said he found a bloody hammer on the scene and no broken glass. Smith took the hammer and a picture of Cowens to the hospital. And by an improvised system of sign language, he said, Miss Williams indicated that Cowens had struck her on the head with the hammer.

She worked it out again yesterday in court for Judge James R. Duncan. Other testimony indicated Cowens had been drinking and was angry with Miss Williams.

Bowling Alley Embezzler Put On Probation

A former manager of the Bethesda Bowling Center, 7651 Old Georgetown rd., who admitted taking $1690 from the establishment, yesterday was placed on indefinite probation by Montgomery County Circuit Court.

Police said the man, Frederick F. Murphy, 46, of 2400 13th st. nw., had already paid back $1017 of the missing funds.

In generally suspending the sentence, Judge Stedman Prescott pointed to Murphy's previous good record, his Army wartime service and said he was going to give the defendant an opportunity "to make a man of yourself!"

Of the stolen money, $330 belonged to a bowling league of which Murphy was treasurer and the rest to the Bowling Center.

Murphy pleaded guilty to embezzlement and larceny after trust and said the money went toward maintaining a separate apartment for his present wife while she was awaiting a divorce from her previous husband.

Stable Groom In Girl Case Given Term

Lancelot Russell, 40, a stable groom, yesterday was sentenced to 10 to 30 years in jail on two counts of carnal knowledge of a 15-year-old girl, who is now pregnant.

The sentence was imposed by District Court Judge Edward M. Curran, in whose court Russell was convicted by a jury of 10 men and 2 women on May 25. The jury had not prescribed the death penalty, which the Government had asked.

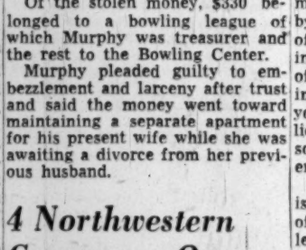
The Negro groom, who lives at 1428 Rock Creek Ford rd. nw., admitted in a signed statement that he had had sexual relations with the blue-eyed girl "once or twice" a week since the summer of 1948. She told the jury she met Russell at his mother's stables and wanted to ride in shows for him. She said she had sexual relations many times with Russell since she was 14.

Judge Curran imposed a $1000 fine on Joseph Waldman, 3000 39th st. nw., who pleaded guilty June 20 to fraudulently concealing assets of $446.40 in a bankruptcy proceeding October 21, 1941, when he was president of Jean's, Inc. He was also given a suspended sentence of 20 months to 5 years.

Kathryn White, 32, of 3929 14th st. nw., was sentenced by Judge Curran to 1 to 3 years after pleading guilty to charges of forging four checks, totaling $283.25, last December and January.

Judge Richmond B. Keech imposed the following sentences on three men, found guilty of a series of recent robberies: Clinton J. Kilpatrick, 23, of 1314 10th st. nw., 5 to 15 years; Johnnie Hogan, 30, of 1314 10th st. nw., 4 to 12 years; Ernest V. Wellingham, 21, of 1314 10th st. nw., 2 to 10 years.

Mother's Divorce Suit Names Her Daughter as Corespondent



Patricia Stamm — Mrs. Leah Fowler
Mother accuses daughter

Los Angeles, June 24 (AP).—A screen writer's wife suing for divorce has asked court permission to name her own daughter as corespondent.

Mrs. Leah Ruth Fowler, 47, filed an affidavit yesterday charging her husband, Frank Gilman Fowler, 49, with adultery with her daughter by a previous marriage, Mrs. Patricia Stamm, 24.

Mrs. Fowler said she and detectives surprised Fowler, who writes under the name of Borden Chase, and her divorcee daughter "entirely naked" in the daughter's apartment. Mrs. Fowler's attorney said wire recordings and pictures will be submitted as evidence.

The Fowlers, married in 1930, have a son, Barrie, 15. Mrs. Fowler is a concert pianist known professionally as Lee Keith.

'Refreshing's' Word For Film at Dupont

"LOVE LIFE OF NAPOLEON," at the Dupont, is the most refreshing cinematic experience we've had in months. Sacha Guitry is completely responsible for this treat, since he has conceived directed, produced, written, narrated and played one-half the lead in this gaily brilliant, wryly satiric version of the Napoleonic career.

Originally entitled "Mlle. Desiree" after Desiree Clary, the once-jilted, secret love of the Little Corsican, the picture is really a demonstration of the Gallic wit and theatric originality residing in the person of M. Guitry. As an example of his approach to a film about a famous historical personage, he stops halfway through to give visual screen credit to the artists who have assisted him in creating it. Too, he changes actors midway in the continuity of the action, with an audacious savior-faire which is a delight to witness.

The picture, as you can see, is almost a double feature. The first half is concerned with the early love-life of his central character. Much of it is pantomime, accompanied by the clever commentary of Guitry. In this first portion, the director has put to superb use the magnificent pantomimic talents of Jean-Louis Barrault, as Napoleon courting Desiree but finally marrying Josephine. This is the most enchantingly delightful part of the whole film. Genevieve, the most recent ex-Mme. Guitry, is pert and lovely as Desiree.

Second Half

In the second half, the plot becomes more complicated. In the interim of the actor-change, necessitated by the passing of years, the young lover has given way to the man of destiny, Barrault has given way to Guitry, "himself," and Genevieve has yielded to Gaby Morlay. All the wars of the Emperor, the court intrigues, the political machinations, the eventual defeat at Waterloo, St. Helena, Elba, death, and eventual interment in Les Invalides are all crammed into Part Two. It's a potful of plot but Guitry doesn't spoil the broth.

What might easily have become a grotesque imitation of current movie-biography has been saved by the fusing of all the elements of movie creation by one superbly inventive mind. Most outstanding of all is the quality of the acting in the piece. Barrault makes the young Napoleon a sensitive, idyllicly inclined, but ambitious young soldier. He hints at what will emerge from the chrysalis.

Guitry, as the mature Emperor, is closer to the popular conception of the historic figure, almost ruthlessly ambitious, vain, conscious of his power. But he adds another quality which makes for a more romantic portrait: undying affection for the woman he hurt the most, Desiree. Then, too, beneath the acting image is the ever-present latter-day Frenchman commenting on the convolutions of history, romance, and human manners. So, the sound track rounds out the character, a Napoleon who is more Guitry than Bonaparte.

Excellent Transition

In the second half, there's a fine job of transition in the acting of Gaby Morlay, as the elderly Desiree, from the naivete of Genevieve Guitry. Her innocence at intrigue, her duplicity at the hands of the more experienced Talleyrand, her unspoken affection for her former lover, all logical outgrowths of the original portrayal. It's an interesting experience in continuity-in-acting.

If You Don't Mind Movies, Go Up and See Sammy Kaye

WHAT Robert Cummings does with his money is no concern of ours, but he must have plenty of it when he can afford to waste it on such a vacuous comedy as his first independent production now on view at the Capitol. It's called "Let's Live a Little." This plea should have been denied aborning.

Unhappily for Sammy Kaye and his crew who are putting on a vastly enjoyable stage show, the picture they are teamed with this week is a discredit to the industry and the business acumen of Mr. Cummings. How a fine comedian like Robert ever sank his dough into a bagel like this is beyond us.

Briefly, Bob has a nervous breakdown trying to secure an advertising contract from his former fiancee, Anna Sten. Female neurologist Hedy Lamarr helps him get well but she breaks down until Bob helps her recuperate by clinching with her in the final shot.

In passing we might say that Hedy is the loveliest neurologist we've ever seen; that neither she nor Anna Sten are comedians; that Robert Cummings reminded us of Sisyphus (who kept pushing a rock up a hill and it just never made the top but kept rolling back down atop him). Anytime he got funny the plot rolled right back in his lap and crushed him.

It's much more pleasant to write about the stage show at the Capitol this week. Swing'n' Sway Kaye is offering the audience more humor and entertainment than the feature. Variety is the keynote of the Kaye presentation. Popular ballads by Don Cornell, Laura Leslie, and Tony Llano and listenable. Ernie "Cecil" Rudisill, and Chubby Silvers offer comedy routines. The Roulettes offer thrills on skates. All of it is pleasant.

As an added attraction, Kaye has audience participation in his "Wanna Lead a Band" feature. Leaders are chosen by ticket from the audience. Individual show winners receive a prize and are invited back to try out for the Grand Prize.

Jury Decides Blue Law Bans Sunday Races

Hagerstown, Md., June 24.—The co-owner of a motor speedway near Hagerstown today was convicted of violating a blue law prohibiting all but necessary work on Sundays.

On trial was Edward Goetz of Chambersburg, Pa., for breaking Maryland's ancient Sabbath law by staging Sunday races.

The jury deliberated only 45 minutes before returning a guilty verdict. Sentencing was deferred, but the conviction means a $5 fine plus court costs.

Defense attorneys said they were thinking of asking for a new trial.

The law prohibits all work on Sunday, except that deemed necessary and charitable. It also prohibits Sunday amusements. It has been chipped away with amendments since 1723.

Martin L. Ingam, Washington County State's Attorney, told the jury it still bans such things as Sunday motor races and movies in this county and is a good law.

His statement to the jury came after the defense had argued that modern man needs a lot of recreation and relaxation on Sunday because of the complexities of modern life.

The argument was built up through a chain of five witnesses.

The State's one witness was Deputy Sheriff Leister Isanogle. He told about arresting Goetz. Under cross-examination he said he'd gone to the races several times.

Wheat Reported Little Damaged By Stem Rust

The Agricultural Research Administration yesterday announced that stem rust has caused very little damage so far in the principal wheat-producing regions west of the Mississippi.

"Much confusion about the extent of stem rust damage to wheat, especially in Kansas, has resulted from outbreaks of leaf rust, virus diseases, black chaff, scab, glume blotch and other diseases," the agency said. It didn't estimate the amount of damage resulting from these infections.

Yesterday it was reported that Secretary Charles F. Brannan has put off until July 11 a decision whether marketing quotas and acreage allotments for wheat will be necessary next year. At that time the crop report as of July 1 will be available.

Brannan, it was said, wants to see if the wheat damage is such as to make restrictions unnecessary next year.

Let AEC Officials Get Back to Jobs, Lawmaker Asks

Representative Price (D., Ill.) yesetrday demanded an end to the lengthy congressional atomic investigation so top atomic officials can "get back on the job."

The Illinois lawmaker, a member of the Senate-House Atomic (Watchdog) Committee, said the hearings have kept Atomic Energy Commission members from their work and taken the time of "almost every top AEC official."

Price said in a statement that "up to now it may well be that this investigation has done more harm than good."

But Chairman McMahon (D. Conn.) said in a later statement he had promised the people a full review of the evidence of Senator Hickenlooper's (R., Iowa) charges of commission mismanagement, with an equal cahnce for the AEC to reply.

He hopes for speed, he said, but "I can see no other satisfactory procedure."

Congress Passes Three Billions In Money Bills

By the United Press

Congress yesterday sent to the White House two money bills carrying nearly three billion dollars to run the Agriculture and Labor Departments and the Federal Security Agency for the 1950 fiscal year beginning June 30.

The over-all total of the two bills was about nine million dollars more than President Truman requested.

One bill, on which both houses completed action, contains $715,601,000 for the Agriculture Department. This is 11 million dollars less than the President asked.

The Senate put the final touches on the second, which provides $2,255,000,000 for the Labor Department and Federal Security Agency—nearly 20 million dollars more than Mr. Truman wanted.

Rifle Goes Off, Killing Hunter In Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., June 24 (AP).—A groundhog hunting party ended last night in the death of a 21-year-old power company lineman.

William Henry Powers was fatally wounded by a rifle bullet as he rode in a car with his father and a cousin on Sandy Mile road near Hancock, Md., when they started out to hunt groundhogs. The cousin was driving the car. A rifle rested between him and William. The elder Flowers was in the back seat.

A shot was heard and William was killed.

Rep. Kee to Leave Hospital Soon

Representative Kee (D., W. Va.), who has been in Walter Reed Hospital for two weeks, is expected to leave it soon, Mrs. Kee said yesterday.

Mrs. Kee said her husband has been undergoing a "routine check-up" and may be sent home this weekend.

Note From Auto Leads to 'Kidnap' Probe in Virginia

St. Paul, Va., June 24 (AP).—A note covertly dropped from an automobile led today to the investigation of a paroled murderer and a former convict on possible kidnap charges.

State police and local southwest Virginia authorities snagged the armed pair after a chase last night through this hilly coal mining country. A threat of resistance dissolved as heavily armed police ringed the car that was overtaken near Norton, Va.

In the car were William Bearden, 24, and James Bearden, 29. With them was the woman who dropped the note claiming she had been kidnaped Sunday at Houston, Tex.—blonde Barbara Gail Lamarr, 24.

In Decatur, Ga., Police Capt. Tom Ellis said his investigation there indicated the woman was not kidnaped.

Communist Tells N. Y. Trial About Teaching Revolt

New York, June 24 (AP).—A Communist conspiracy trial defendant testified today he taught a Communist class that the events of the Russian revolution were not to be used as an exact guide by the party.

Gilbert Green of Chicago, the defendant, was on the stand for the eighth day on direct examination. He told of teaching a class of college students in the summer of 1939.

He said he taught the group that they would study Communist history "like Americans study about the American revolution, the American bourgeois revolution."

Americans study their own Revolutionary War, the witness said, to learn the basic lessons implied but not to apply them in mechanical fashion to present-day conditions.

'Deficit Assured,' Wigglesworth Says

Representative Wigglesworth (R., Mass.) told the House yesterday a Government operating deficit for the fiscal year starting July 1 "is already assured."

A member of the Appropriations Committee, Wigglesworth said the House has voted appropriations of about $36,574,000,000 and $4,309,000,000 in contract authorizations, against estimated tax receipts of $38,900,000,000

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

After Loafing All Year, Bill Needs a Rest

By the time you read this column, I'll be off on my vacation. Three weeks from now, I should be back with a nice sunburn, lots of new stories, no money, and a firm conviction that if I'd have stayed just one more week I'd have learned to hit a straight midiron.

The morning mail brings this offering, which is certainly timely:

Too long I've trod the city street.
But now my heart lifts with elation;
I'm off, at last, on my vacation.

I'll boat, I'll golf, I'll hike, I'll fish.
I'll nod my head; they'll grant my wish.
Vacation time? It can't be beat
Tho I'll have rain, and cold, and heat.

Marian S. Lamont.

HAPPY BOY'S DAY, DICKIE

J. R. Thomasson of 2617 29th st. se. reports that Dickie Thomasson (who is 4 years old today) seems to be slightly confused about Mother's Day and Father's Day.

After puzzling about the situation for some time, Dickie asked his mother recently:

"Mother, when is Boy's Day?"

GIVE-AWAYS

"About 75 lithographed seals of George Washington and Georgetown Universities." (Wisconsin 6384.)

"Mixed terrier, little over year old; excellent watchdog but affectionate to those he knows." (Shepherd 8834.)

"Mother cat and four cute, lively kittens." (Warfield 7161.)

"Four puppies, 7 weeks old; their mother is a registered beagle." (Warfield 9297.)

"Ten-month-old kitten and her 1-month-old ginger-colored brother. Will deliver." (Sligo 3243.)

"Positively housebroken, year-old male cat with gentle and charming personality. Will deliver." (Hobart 0707.)

"Large dog; he's a mongrel, but has character." (Alexandria 5732.)

"Four inquisitive, healthy kittens, 6 weeks old. Will deliver in Silver Spring." (Sligo 1727.)

"Four cute kittens; we love them, but seven cats are too much—even for a cat fancier." (Vienna 443.)

"Gentle, affectionate, year-old male pup with unusually happy disposition. Good watchdog." (Woodley 9167 after 7 p. m.)

"Three beautiful kittens, 6 weeks old and fully independent." (Alexandria 4565.)

"Mixed breed male dog, half pedigreed Irish setter. Needs home in country with somebody interested in hunting." (Franklin 9000 extension 626 or 562 during day, or Warfield 4340 after 6 p. m.)

"Four 7-week-old kittens." (Shepherd 3679.)

"Mother cat and four lovely 6-week-old kittens." (Georgia 0473.)

"Cute 12-week-old tiger kitten." (Randolph 5174.)

A COUPLE OF BABES

E. V. Pierce of 3808 17th pl. ne. and W. M. Devine of 234 F st. nw. note that our sports department gave good coverage to the Women's Western Open Golf Tournament which (we said) featured such stellar female golfers as "Babe Didrikson Zaharias and Grace Lenczyk, the 2-year-old National Amateur champion."

If Grace shoots a 66 at the age of 2, just think what a golfer she'll be when she grows up.

VENDORS, PRO & CON

When M. G. wrote to complain about ice cream vendors, I replied "rubbish." I said that I didn't see how we could legislate against the vendors on the grounds that they're very popular with children.

A lawyer friend says: "You overlook the fact that these vendors are what is frequently called 'an attractive nuisance' in that sprightly little Washington Post feature called 'What's the Verdict?'

"The children run to greet the vendor, and may therefore be struck by a passing car. There is legal basis for legislating against such attractive nuisances."

J. G. Veihmeyer of 307 34th pl. ne. takes the same tack. He's a mail carrier, and has been watching the street vendors on his route for some time.

He says that he's seen several near-tragedies, soon after the vendor has announced his arrival in the neighborhood by ringing his bell.

"Did you ever see a racehorse set sail when the starting gate opens, or a dash man leap forward as the starter's pistol goes off? That's what happens when the kids hear the ice cream man's bell.

"They don't remember safety lectures, their games, or anything else. They just light out for the ice cream man.

"I agree that we should try to teach traffic safety to our children. Your logic is fine. But in actual practice, the street vendors constitute a definite hazard."

Contrary testimony comes from Larry Woltz of 7400 Hopkins ave., College Park, Md., who says:

"The ice cream vendor is in a position to be one of our best salesmen for traffic safety—and many of them are just that.

"In Colmar Manor last summer, I overheard the Good Humor man tell a group of children:

"'If you don't wait on the curb until it's safe to cross, I won't sell you any ice cream.'

"Most vendors I have met have been safety conscious, and sincerely interested in the welfare of their young customers."

Walter Whiteley Hubbard of the American Automobile Association injects one more thought into the discussion. He points out that if we're talking about traffic safety, it doesn't make much sense to prohibit one vehicle from serving an entire neighborhood with ice cream, and thereby make it necessary for hundreds of vehicles to cruise about the streets looking for a store that's open on Sunday.

Pursuing that "safety" angle a bit further, I'd like to get my oar in, too. When I started this ruckus, I said that if there's a reason for prohibiting street vendors entirely, or prohibiting their use of noise-making devices, that's a question which can and should be decided on its merits.

But the Commissioners have not done this. They have prohibited street vendors from operating only on Sunday, and have cited the "traffic safety" angle to support their decision.

But they permit street vendors to function on the other six days of the week, when vacation-freed children roam the streets with less parental supervision than on Sunday.

All I ask is: What kind of sense does that make? Are these vendors a menace, or aren't they? If they are, why don't we abolish them? If they are not, why do we pick on them and arbitrarily forbid them to earn a living on Sunday?

DATE WTH JUDY

H. Milton Chase of 618 S. 25th st., Arlington, Va., makes an interesting observation about the testimony in the Judith Coplon trial. He says:

"What seems like true love often turns out to be just a passing fiance."

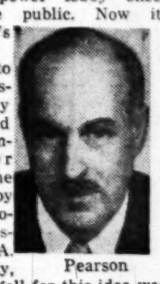
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Favorable TVA Report Buried

By Drew Pearson

There's a secret report on the Tennessee Valley Authority that the private power lobby once wanted made public. Now it doesn't. Here's the reason.



Pearson

In order to block the Missouri Valley authority and other Government power projects, the big utility lobby quietly proposed an investigation of TVA. Significantly, the man who fell for this idea was Nevada's Republican George Malone, who headed a mysterious research organization financed by private power companies.

This outfit—the Industrial West Foundation—still has offices in downtown Washington and, by interesting coincidence, this same office is now used by Malone's senatorial staff. His Capitol Hill offices, he explains, are too crowded—though Malone represents the least populated State in the Union, and though other Senators find sufficient room in their offices on Capitol Hill.

At any rate, while the Republicans controlled Congress Malone headed a Public Works subcommittee, which he set to work prying into TVA. He called a hearing and listened to witnesses criticize the giant, power-navigation-flood-control project. The criticisms sounded so good that he even ordered a triple-threat investigation of TVA by the Federal Power Commission, Army engineers, and the General Accounting Office.

But their report has never been published. Senator Malone is still sitting on it.

What happened, of course, is that the report turned out to be favorable to TVA.

This column has obtained a copy of the report, and it shows that Malone tried to steer the investigators with a hint that TVA bookkeepers might have juggled figures so as to make the electric power benefits more favorable.

However, when the Federal Power Commission, the Army engineers, and the General Accounting Office finished their survey, it showed that the highest estimated annual cost of TVA's navigation system is $8,228,000, whereas the lowest estimate of annual benefits is $9,364,000. For flood control, the highest estimated annual cost is $7,295,000, as compared with $8,963,000, which is the lowest estimated annual benefits. In other words, TVA is operating on a sound economical basis. Even discounting these figures, the commission estimated that the power benefits alone would pay for the complete project in 50 years.

Slip In FBI Files

It is not known outside the Justice Department, but it was either an ironic twist of fate or a deliberate trick by some FBI subordinate that put the Condon files into the Judith Coplon case. They had no relevance whatsoever, and were not in the files that the Attorney General had read in advance.

However, when the stack of FBI reports turned up in court, the Condon report was strangely included among them. The FBI explanation given to higher-ups is that the Condon papers got stuck in a paper clip behind another report. Insiders can't help but consider it strange that one of the most efficient bureaus in Washington would let so secret and highly important a document get mislaid in such a way that it would turn up in court.

Peron Expels Opponents

The inside story of how the leader of President Peron's opposition party was kicked out of the Argentine Congress would be quite funny if it didn't represent another body blow at democracy in the Americas.

Last July, Peron's stooges in the Argentine Chamber of Deputies, who have a two-thirds majority, voted to expel radical party leader Ernesto Sammartino on the ground that he had "defamed" the dictator. With his parliamentary immunity removed, Sammartino was then chased by the federal cops—but escaped to Uruguay, where he has been ever since.

Last month the second opposition leader was given the bum's rush. This time Sammartino's successor, Agustin Rodriguez Araya, was expelled from Congress on instructions from Dona Evita Peron, who more and more is becoming the real boss of Argentine politics.

Like Sammartino, Rodriguez Araya never hesitated to name names, facts and figures when attacking the administration on the chamber floor. Nevertheless, Peron himself did not favor any direct action against Rodriguez Araya, figuring that the persecution of Sammartino may have been partly responsible for a sharp upturn in radical votes during the recent provincial elections.

But no such strategic considerations bothered Senora Peron. She had been out to get Rodriguez Araya for two years, ever since he publicly lampooned some of the first lady's more flamboyant antics while touring Europe in 1947. In fact, the then leader of Peron's majority in Congress lost his job at that time for failing to comply with Eva's demand, cabled from Italy, to "get rid of Rodriguez before I return."

Last June 4, anniversary of the 1943 military coup that brought Peron to power, the government issued some pious pronouncements about "freedom" and "democracy." Next day, on the floor of the chamber, Rodriguez Araya laid into these declarations with bitter sarcasm.

In a matter of hours, word came to Peronista congressional chieftains from Dona Evita's office that "this is it"—the long-awaited moment of revenge had arrived. And this time, the yes-men knew better than to say no.

When on June 10 the expulsion motion reached a vote, Rodriguez Araya knew the outcome was cut and dried. So he quietly left the chamber and went to the Uruguayan embassy, where he requested and received asylum.

Roberto MacEachen, Uruguayan Ambassador to Argentina, at once took a plane for Montevideo to consult President Luis Batlle Berres regarding his controversial guest. Meanwhile, the Chamber of Deputies, having voted on a strict majority-minority basis—107-42—to throw Rodriguez Araya out, approved by the same margin a motion to instruct the attorney general to institute criminal libel proceedings against the former deputy.

Thereupon the Argentine foreign ministry advised the Uruguayan embassy that Rodriguez Araya was subject to arrest and consequently "not entitled to asylum." Less than an hour later, however, word came from Montevideo that Uruguayan President Batlle would insist on a safe conduct for the political refugee.

Seeing their bluff called, the tough-talking Peronistas hastily backed down. A communique issued by the foreign ministry called the whole thing a "misunderstanding," said that Rodriguez Araya could "remain in Argentina or leave, as a free man." The latter promptly made his choice and flew to Montevideo.

The government-owned press next morning ridiculed the entire affair as a "comic opera." Evita's personal mouthpiece, Democracia, commented:

"Dramatic critics would have a hard time deciding whether Rodriguez Araya or Uruguayan Ambassador MacEachen is the better comedian."

More impartial observers inclined toward the opinion that the laugh, if any, was strictly on Peron & Co. The total implications of this new affront to democratic procedure, however, tended to overshadow its humorous side.

Under the Dome

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—In Capt. Harry Butcher's book, "My Three Years With Eisenhower," the author reported that some diary pages, containing top secret memorandum, were lost and never found. Captain Butcher is positive that the cleaning-woman in their office picked them up from the floor, together with the discarded paper and, as she always did, burned them. Randolph Churchill recently told Captain Butcher about a top secret paper which disappeared from his father's office in 1942—the Prime Minister's summary of the number of British and American men, ships and planes to be used in the imminent African invasion.

Churchill wrote the summary himself, sent it to the First Sea Lord and the Air Chief Marshal, who made their comments and returned it. An aide, who was to have placed the document in the green chest where top secret documents were kept, glanced at it, became curious and put it in his pocket, intending to read it and then return it. That night, in a restaurant, it fell from his pocket and was found later by a charwoman. She saw the "top secret" stamp, read no further and rushed it to a sergeant who lived in her house—a sergeant who often had lectured her household about security.

The sergeant saw the "top secret" mark, and he too read no further, but raced to the Air Ministry where he demanded to see no one less than a vice marshal. An amused guard barred his way, until through the ministry seeped word about a missing paper—and an officer, passing by, heard the sergeant mention a top secret document. The room quickly filled with vice marshals, who accepted delivery of Winston Churchill's summary of the men and equipment to be used in the invasion of Africa . . . And that year, when the King's Honors list was released, it contained the names of a London charwoman and a sergeant.
